QUINCY WOMAN AND CHILD END LIVES IN SUICIDE PACT

LOCK DOOR AND TURN ON GAS

Mrs. Clara E. Pearson, well-known restaurant owner in Quincy and Hough's Neck, and her twelve-year-old daughter committed suicide today in their rooms at No. 1611 Hancock street, Quincy.

They were found lying side by side on a couch in their nightclothes when Representative Edward J. Sandberg, whose wife was a friend of Mrs. Pearson's, and Charles Moyle forced the bedroom door. The woman and her daughter had stuffed crevices around doors and windows with paper and then turned on the gas.

Two notes, one in English and the other in Swedish, were found in the room. They simply stated that mother and daughter had committed suicide.

LOSING MONEY.

Mrs. Pearson, it is said, had been worrying because her restaurants had been losing money. For two years she had conducted a restaurant in the Summer at Hough's Neck. Her Quincy restaurant, which she opened a year ago, is in the Kincaide building, in Hancock street.

Mrs. Pearson was at the restaurant until midnight, Friday. When she didn't put in an appearance, one of the waitresses, Miss Annie Anderson, went to her rooms to see if anything was wrong. She found the door locked and received no response when she wrapped. She smelled gas.

Becoming alarmed, she ran into the street and there met Representative Sandberg, whose wife she knew as a friend of Mrs. Pearson. With Mr. Moyle, Sandberg then went to the house and forced the door.

RUINS OF HOME IN WHICH MRS. SMALL DIED

Only the foundation walls and part of the chimney remain. The fire wiped out almost everything except evidence of the crime.

NEW EVIDENCE OF CRIME DISCOVERED

The murder of Mrs. Arlene Curry Small at Lake Ossipee, N. H., which was discovered by one of those strange chances of fate which defeat the most cunning and elaborate plans to conceal a crime, is now directly charged to her husband, Frederick C. Small, the Boston broker.

Mrs. Small had been beaten, shot and strangled. The cottage in which she and her husband lived in Mountain View, N. H., on the shore of Lake Ossipee, was set on fire to conceal the murder.

The cottage burned to the ground, but the body fell into a pool of water. Enough of it was preserved from the flames so that a piece of window cord was seen wound around the neck. This led to investigation and discovery of one of the most atrocious crimes in New England history.

A warrant was issued early today against the husband at Mountain View. It was made out by J. D. B. Hill, county solicitor of Carroll County. It charged Small with murder in the first degree.

The accused husband, who was held at the Central House in Mountain View, pending arraignment, protested his innocence. He said:

"I only want to say that I am innocent."

SMALL ARRAIGNED.

Soon after the warrant was issued, they took Small downstairs from the room in which he had been detained in the Central House and arraigned him before Judge Morrill of Ossipee. The prosecu-

The Greatest Baseball Race in History

Brooklyn and Philadelphia, and perhaps the Braves have a chance for the pennant in the National League.

The Red Sox are fighting desperately to hold their lead in the American League with the White Sox close behind.

The next few games will decide the most thrilling pennant races in the history of baseball.

Philadelphia will play:
One game with Brooklyn.
Six games with Boston.

Brooklyn will play:
One game with Philadelphia.
Four games with New York.

Boston will play:
Two games with New York.
Six games with Philadelphia.

The complete stories of these games will appear ONLY IN THE COMPLETE BASEBALL EDITION OF THE BOSTON AMERICAN.

SOX MAY CLINCH PENNANT TODAY

There is another great crisis in the National and American League pennant races today. The result of today's diamond battles will play an important part in deciding the pennant winners in both major organizations.

Bill Carrigan's Red Sox may clinch the American League flag today. If they defeat the Yankees while Cleveland is winning two games from the White Sox, Boston will have won another American League pennant.

By winning from the Yankees yesterday, the Red Sox put the Tigers out of the battle for the championship.

PHILLIES BATTLE DODGERS.

In the National League, the Giants were put out of the running for the pennant by the calling off of yesterday's game with the Braves. It will be impossible for them to play off the postponement, as a double-header was scheduled for this afternoon, when the Braves wind up their series in New York.

The Dodgers and Phillies are engaging in a death grapple in Brooklyn. With morning and afternoon tion planned to ask that Small be held without bail and committed to Ossipee jail.

While investigation and prosecution were in swift progress at Mountain View, the mother and sister of the murdered woman were trying today, in their Dorchester home, to bear up under this fresh blow. The mother is Mrs. Mary E. Curry of No. 32 Nightingale street. She said:

"My daughter Florence was a handsome woman and had many friends. She was married nine years ago to Mr. Small, at that time living in Southboro, where we were all happy.

"Since her marriage she has been forced by Mr. Small to stay away from her folks. He had her practically in his power and made her do as he saw fit.

"When stopping in Boston my daughter and her husband generally made their home at the Parker House, but during the Summer camped in New Hampshire. She is the third daughter of Captain Alfred Curry of Hortonville, N. S., and all I am glad for is that he is dead and does not have to bear this trouble with the rest of us."

Small was represented before Judge Morrill by Attorney Sydney B. Stevens of Somersworth. The State was represented by Attorney-General Tuttle of Manchester.

BROTHER ARRIVES.

F. O. Small of Portland, Me., a brother of the arraigned man, arrived at Mountain View early today after a wild auto ride from the Maine city.

There was an affectionate greeting between the brothers for a moment, and then both broke down. They hugged each other and then the tears welled up in the eyes of both. The visiting brother offered words of cheer and tried to comfort the man who is facing a trial for life.

Small spent the most of the night in conference in his room with his attorney, and then later in the small hours of the morning with his brother, who arrived while it was still dark.

Early today Small was taken from his room to the dining room of the hotel for breakfast. He merely toyed with his food, and the strain has placed him on the edge of a nervous breakdown.

BULLET FOUND.

A bullet lodged near the right cheek bone was found in the body of Mrs. Small, according to the finding today of Medical Examiner H. Frank Horne, who conducted the autopsy.

The bullet, the authorities claim, exactly fits an automatic revolver which was found in the cellar ruins of the cottage. This bullet fractures the frontal bone, entering near the left temple. It was not sufficient to cause immediate death.

The inquest further shows that death was due to strangulation, a piece of window cord being found tightly knotted about the victim's neck. Eight distinct wounds, caused by a blunt instrument, were found on the back of the head. These wounds, the medical referee says, were probably caused by a billet of wood, but did not cause death, although they doubtless produced insensibility.

Small at first refused to say who the other man was, but finally admitted that it was George Kennett, clerk of the Central House at Mountain View, who drove to the Small cottage Thursday afternoon.

"Mr. Kennett got the mail at the rural free delivery box," continued Small, "and brought it down with him. As he reached the house, I was standing outside the door and he handed me the mail. I stepped inside the house and handed the package to my wife, bidding her goodby as I did so. Kennett saw me kiss her goodby. As I left she said 'do not for get to bring me the piece of lace I want you to get for me in Boston.' I told her I would not and went out and entered the carriage with Mr. Kennett.

"That is all I know about the fire or her death until I entered the office of Young's Hotel after 12 o'clock in the morning and was met with the announcement that a telephone message had been received stating that my house was destroyed by fire and my wife was missing. I came here as rapidly as an automobile could bring me and I think we made the trip at over 120 miles in less than four hours."

OIL CAN EMPTY.

After a day of wild excitement, following the destruction by fire of the cottage owned by the Smalls and the subsequent discovery of Mrs. Small's brutally treated body, New Hampshire officials face the mystery of one of the most atrocious and puzzling tragedies in State history ever known.

Thus far the officers at work on the mystery have established that Small and his wife were at the house at 11 o'clock Thursday, when a grocer's clerk delivered a quantity of goods. Among this was a five gallon can of kerosene, the authorities say. After the fire this can was found empty. As far as can be ascertained, after Small had left the house shortly after 11 o'clock, no one has been found who saw Mrs. Small alive.

Small's story is to the effect that he kissed his wife good-bye before leaving for Boston just before driving from the house with Kennett. Kennett later, to a group of reporters, said that at the time he called at the Small cottage, Mrs. Small was not to be seen on the piazza as was her custom and did not appear to kiss her husband good-bye, as Small has stated.

Small further said that his predicament is due solely to the work of political enemies he had made in Ossipee. "I believe one man alone is responsible," he said, "for getting the medical referee and the Sheriff here to arrest me and cause me this humiliation and pain." Beyond this and in substantiation of this statement, Small would say nothing.

KENNETT DENIES THAT HE SAW SMALL KISS WIFE GOOD-BY

Small was taken into custody not long after he arrived here from Boston, after a record-breaking five-hour automobile trip. Small went to Boston on the 4:05 p. m. train Thursday, accompanied by E. C. Conner, principal of the Alba School, the town academy.

They had planned the journey for several days. At 1:30 p. m. Thursday Proprietor Frank Ferren of the Central House received an order from Small's cottage for a vehicle to take him to the depot.

As is frequently the case, Ferren had no driver available other than George Kennett, clerk at the hotel and a close personal friend of Small. Kennett says that Small met him at the side door of his cottage. Often when he drives to the cottage, he says, Small invites him to the door.

This time, according to the hotel clerk's story, he received no invitation to enter the yard. Kennett had some mail for Small. Small took it, according to Kennett, said he would take it in the house, did so, came out and was driven to the depot.

Small insists that Kennett saw him kiss his wife before the buckboard was driven away from the cottage door.

Kennett declares flatly that he did not see Small kiss the cottage.

WISHES HE'D KEPT AWAY.

"I'd give my horse if I had not gone to the cottage yesterday," said Kennett, "but I didn't think there was (I didn't."

At the Mountain View Depot Small was joined by Conner. Conner tells in detail what happened from the time the two left this village at 4:05 o'clock Thursday afternoon until their arrival back early this morning.

Conner says they registered at Young's Hotel Friday, that they wandered about the streets for a short time, went into the grill at Clark's Hotel, attended the theatre and arrived back at Young's not long after midnight, where the telephone message was awaiting Small.

Conner says that Small made haste to engage an automobile and that the two broke all speed laws in their frantic rush to Mountain View.

The ruins were still blazing when Small arrived at the cottage, several miles from the town, in a sparsely settled section on Lake Ossipee. To reach it one has to leave the eastside boulevard and traverse a rough road to the lake. There are a half dozen other summer cottages in the vicinity, but the occupants have departed.

Small has not been allowed to see the body, and he has not yet been told of the discoveries which were made when the townspeople dragged it from the smouldering embers.

DROP ROBBERY THEORY.

The authorities have discarded robbery as motive for the crime. Soon after the discovery of the body, they came across articles which will have an important bearing on the case.

They found Mrs. Small's watch stopped at 11:50 p. m. Nearby were three rings, a diamond solitaire

KENNETT SAYS SMALL SHOWED NO SIGNS OF NERVOUSNESS

The bungalow that the Smalls owned was purchased through Postmaster Charles A. Hall of Dunstable for the sum of $900 three years ago. Since that time Small, who has made frequent trips to Boston to speculate in the stock market, has made many improvements on the property, and at the present time has been one of the show places of that section of the lake shore.

Kennett, the hotel clerk, was the last person who saw Mrs. Small in the cottage. Conner was with Small continuously from 4 p. m. Thursday, when they left for Ossipio, until 1 a. m. Friday, when the two arrived back in Mountainview. Conner says that in all that time he observed nothing unusual about his companion's manner.

Conner says he was nervous and excitable after he had been notified at Young's of the calamity in Mountainview.

Throughout the day and evening Small was detained in the hotel room with deputy sheriffs guarding the door. He asked that Dr. Isaac F. G. Small of Portland, an engineer on the Maine Central Railroad, be notified, also his nephew, Nathaniel M. Mitchell of Lewiston, Me. The latter arrived in Mountainview, but was not allowed to see Small.

Mitchell was certain that a great mistake had been made in detaining his uncle.

"I don't believe it is possible that he was implicated in this awful tragedy," said Mitchell.

"Only a few weeks ago Mr. and Mrs. Small came to visit me. They seemed to be a very happy couple."

CLOSELY GUARDED.

Long after darkness had fallen, a curious crowd lingered about the hotel.

High Sheriff Chandler made frequent trips to the room where Small was confined. A deputy sheriff was seated at the door all day and another took his place at nightfall.

It was Proprietor Ferren of the Central House who discovered the fire in the Small cottage. Ferren had been attending a Grange meeting.

Townspeople hastened to the lake and found that the house was already doomed. There is no organized fire department in the village of Mountainview. First arrivals at the fire ran about the house shouting. No one knew what had become of Mrs. Small. At 3:30 the house was burned to the ground. Only smouldering embers remained.

Somebody saw a woman's arm, partly burned, sticking through the charred ruins. The body itself was smouldering when it was dragged from the ruins. The body had lain on a bed in the rear second-floor chamber of the two and one-half-story wooden structure. When the flames ate their way through the floor and fell through to the cellar, landing face downward.

SEEKS FOR RELATIVES.

Lying in a pool of water, the body when it was dragged forth revealed the murder. High Sheriff Chandler decided in a very short time that action was demanded. He returned to the village, met Small, who arrived after his wife's automobile ride with Conner from Boston, and placed the husband of the dead woman under detention.

Small appeared at first not to realize that he was in a serious position, but gradually it dawned upon him. Soon he began sending word of his predicament to relatives.

He replied to Sheriff Chandler's questions readily enough, but the further the inquiry progressed the more determined the authorities became that he ought to be arraigned.

Medical Referee Horne performed the autopsy and it was decided to postpone the inquest until today.

Small's brother, Rev. Andrew Kennett, the hotel clerk, will be asked to face Small and repeat the statements he has made about the time he and he drove to the Small cottage.

According to the authorities, Small has insisted from the beginning that Kennett saw Mrs. Small before he drove away. Kennett is sure he did not.

Law Suits, Marriages and Fires Feature Life

Frederick C. Small was born in Portland, Me., forty-seven years ago. He lived in Maine until he reached his majority. Before coming to Boston he made his first matrimonial venture when he wedded a Miss Nettie Davis of Auburn, Me. The first Mrs. Small died, and shortly afterward he came to Boston and worked.

He worked as a waiter in a Spring lane sandwich depot and afterward went West and became a clerk in a small hotel he remained there and engaged as a chef in a hotel at Swampscott. While in the West he also entered the newspaper field, buying a small scale to be sure, but as evidence of his supreme confidence in his own versatility he branched out as an editor of a small paper. But both of these ventures proved unlucrative enough, and it was not long before he entered the brokerage field.

TWO MYSTERIOUS FIRES.

Small met with more than ordinary success in his new line of endeavor, and in 1900 he leased twenty-five acres of farmland in Hudson, known as the Brigham farm, and entertained lavishly. But while living on the Hudson farm official attention was first attracted to him because of two mysterious fires which broke out on August 27 of that year. The first fire broke out at 11 a. m. but was discovered and extinguished by a railroad engineer.

In the same mysterious manner, however, a second fire was discovered on the premises later in the day, despite the fact that it was midsummer and no fires were lighted. At 2:40 in the afternoon the second fire was discovered in the loft of the barn, filled with hay. The blaze apparently originated near the chimney, and this fire partially destroyed the premises.

Small had had the place heavily insured when he mortgaged it, and there was an investigation into the fires, but without result.

He opened a small real estate office on Congress street and from real estate it was but a natural step to stocks. It was while dabbling in the brokerage business that he married Laura Patterson, and they took up their residence at Rogers avenue, Somerville. The Smalls lived in Somerville when the suit against Arthur H. Soden was instituted and they lived there until 1912, or just before the case was settled.

ALIENATION SUIT BROUGHT.

Small attained considerable notoriety in 1909, when he sued Arthur H. Soden of this city, former president of the Boston National League baseball club.

That famous litigation, in which Small sued Soden for $500,000 for alienating the affections of his second wife, who was Laura M. Patterson of Everett, created a genuine sensation in State Street and in Boston social circles because of the prominence of the defendant.

While the alienation suit was pending Small sued his wife for divorce, naming Mr. Soden as co-respondent and following the decree—the action being uncontested—the suit against Soden was resumed, but settled on April 5, 1912.

Although he sued for $50,000, Small was awarded about $10,000.

The year 1913 was an eventful one for Small. He had already been awarded the palm for his injured feelings by Ex-Judge Harris, and a man named Frederick Small of Everett was arrested in the South by the United States government in connection with a mine swindle and brought back to Boston. A Boston newspaper identified the Frederick L. Small arrested at Mountainview, N. H., and he promptly sued the paper for libel. He sued for $50,000, and although a verdict was returned in his favor, the damages were placed at only 1 cent.

By that time, Small claimed that his health was being steadily undermined and confided to friends that he needed a rest. He happened across an advertisement in a Boston newspaper telling of a farm owned by Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Curry in Southboro. Small presented himself at the Curry farm, which was set up and equipped as a rest cure. He professed to be much enamored of the place and decided to become a boarder.

MARRIES ARLENE CURRY.

It was not long before he had won the heart of Arlene Curry, despite the protests and objections of Mrs. Curry, her sister Norma, and another sister, who has since died. Small and Arlene—or Florence Curry—were married December 2, 1913, by Rev. Peter McKay of the Fayville Baptist Church.

Small is said to have compelled his wife to furnish the Marlboro Christian Science Church, and he also insisted that she treat as little as possible with her family.

In July, 1914, the Smalls decided to remove from Southboro and moved into Mountainview. By a peculiar coincidence Hreesy Lea, the Southboro home, was burned to the ground the day after Small and his late wife departed.

A rigid police investigation followed the fire at Breesy Lea, but even though the suspicions of the State and local police were deep rooted, they could procure no evidence against the late occupants of the estate.

Since his removal to Lake Ossipee, Small had frequently declared to friends that he had retired from active business life. He no longer actively participated in the stock market and his tradings, it is allowed it to be understood, were trivial.

RICH IMPORTER IN A 'TAXI-MAY PLOT'

Chicago, Sept. 30.—Thomas Piccara, wealthy importer, was slipped out of the Chicago Jail early today and started east in the custody of detectives to prevent court action enjoining his extradition to New York in connection with a murder plot said to involve a half dozen Italian members of Tammany Hall. Piccara was arrested here after detectives had watch two weeks with a spyglass from a nearby-house for his appearance at a place in which he is interested.

BOY HANGS BY CRUSHED ARM 45 MINUTES

With his left arm caught between the pan and track of a chain elevator at the fourth floor, John McLaughlin, eighteen years old, of No. 3 Prospect avenue, Charlestown, hung suspended for forty-five minutes while firemen and police effected a rescue by chopping and prying away the elevator with crowbars and axes. The elevator was located in the factory of Potter & Wrightington, at No. 85 Charles River avenue, Charlestown.

The boy showed the greatest courage during the ordeal, and remained conscious all the time. While the firemen were chopping at the elevator the Rev. Michael J. Murphy, chaplain of the State prison, uttered words of cheer and encouragement to the youth, and when the elevator was finally chopped away assisted the firemen in removing the boy from his perilous position.

It was the first day of McLaughlin's employment at the factory. Employes are not supposed to ride on the elevators, which are used for hoisting barrels of flour. Arranged at regular intervals are what are known as "pans," on which the barrels are rolled by a heavy chain like a bicycle chain.

McLaughlin stepped on one of the pans for a ride, and intended to step off at an upper floor, but his sleeve was caught by the chain, and his arm drawn into the narrow space, crushing it. He screamed and employes ran to his aid.

Patrolman Charles Barbick was one of the first to arrive on the scene, and with chisel and hammer knocked off the bolts of the pan, endeavoring to free him.

Several other policemen assisted him, and then Chief McDonald and the men of Ladder 9 were called. The entire upper part of the elevator had to be chopped to pieces before the boy could be released and sent to the Relief Station. It was found that he was suffering from a crushed arm and abrasions of the back. He is the son of Mrs. Mary McLaughlin.

While the rescue was being effected over 1,000 people gathered on the Charlestown bridge, watching the building.

SECOND ARREST IN SHOE THEFT

Charles W. Cancer Cases May Be Cured

By International News Service.

New York, Sept. 30.—More than 300 prominent physicians from all over the United States heard an encouraging report on the treatment of cancer during a discussion of a new method of treatment of the disease read before the eighth annual meeting of the American Association of Clinical Research by Dr. Marshall W. McDuffie, of New York.

The new method is the trypsin treatment by intravenous injections. "The question with most of us is not the theory of a treatment," said Dr. McDuffie, "but whether we will get satisfactory results for our patients."

In testing the value of trypsin more than fifty injections were made into the veins of cats, dogs, rabbits and no toxicity was found. The most visible symptom was the rapid and considerable fall in blood pressure. The reactions are marked by vaso-motor disturbance and flushing of the face and pain at location of the growth with chills and sometimes vomiting.

Twelve hours after an injection all signs of reaction disappear. There is pain in the parts affected, but there has been noticed a marked lessening after several days and later there is a softening of the growth or actual absorption.

THURSTON TALKS OF POOR MATERIAL

Some of the legislative candidates nominated in the recent primaries are pretty poor material, in the opinion of "Ned" Thurston, Republican State chairman.

"Some of them would not be trusted with a ten-dollar note in their own homes," said the State chairman at a meeting of the Worcester County Republican chairmen at Worcester.

The report of the meeting does not state whether Mr. Thurston referred to candidates of his own party or the Democrats, or whether he meant both parties.

"I am sorry," added Mr. Thurston, "that business men in the various cities and towns take no more interest in choosing their representatives in the Legislature. The result of their indifference is an inferior class of men in some instances who go to the State House and there fall prey to the professional politicians, who sway them on matters of legislation."

While many of the men nominated are not crooked, he said, they were inexperienced, and as a result they fall in with wily ones at the State House, and as in the case with apples, "one rotten one will sooner or later spoil the whole barrel."

Mr. Thurston's statements cause Congressman Samuel E. Winslow to say he thought Mr. Thurston was wrong in that he had found, "politically speaking, that the whole barrel sooner or later would be rotten apples."

REPORT 21 PARALYSIS CASES

The State Board of Health today reported twenty-one new cases of infantile paralysis in the State for the twenty-four hours ending at 9 a. m. today. Nine of the cases are in Boston, the same number reported for the previous twenty-four hours in Boston.

Today's figures make the total in the State for this month of 423 cases as compared with 280 from January 1 August 31.

That the epidemic is the worst in the history of the State is shown by the total for the year, 1,015, as compared with 823 for 1909 when an epidemic of the same disease prevailed.

BARRED FROM FAIR.

Brockton has barred all persons under sixteen years from attending the fair next week. It is believed that children will also be barred from all of the Fall fairs in the State.

One case of infantile paralysis was reported in Lynn today, the victim being Russell Noonan, three years old, of No. 31 Michigan avenue.

Shortly after Mayor Curley announced that he would not allow his children to attend school Superintendent John J. Dowling of the City Hospital declared that he would keep his children at home.

Hundreds of other persons in Boston are of the same opinion, and many have written to the School Board opposing the opening.

Dr. David D. Scannel, chairman of the board, declared that the warm weather and the increasing number of cases reported to the health authorities prompted him to arrange a conference today.

Mayor Curley says:

I am no alarmist and I do not want to frighten the residents of Boston, but I do not feel like taking any chances. I have three children of school age, James, nine, Mary, eight, and Dorothy, five. I will not allow them to go to school Monday, and Dr. Dowling will not allow his children to go.

I think there are thousands of parents who feel the same way, and if school opens next Monday I think the schools will be astounded at the slim attendance. I am asking Dr. Malcolm and Dr. Place, both experts on bacteriological research, to appear before the School Committee to give their views.

I am of the impression that they will disagree with Commissioner Mahoney and Deputy Shea, but perhaps it is just as well, in case doctors, like lawyers, disagree, to have both sides heard. I will not appear before the School Committee personally, because I am not a doctor, and therefore do not feel competent to give my views on a medical problem.

CAMBRIDGE DELAYS.

Dr. Mahoney takes a different view of the situation. He thinks there is little chance of the disease spreading, and is going by that opinion by sending his two nieces to their studies on the official date set by the school authorities.

The opening of the Cambridge schools has been postponed to October 3. Cambridge has had an increasing number of cases the past week. There are now about twenty cases of the disease in that city.

Mayor Curley has ordered that steam heat be turned on in the partially completed wards in the new hospital group on the old West Roxbury Parental School grounds in order to get them dried out and habitable in case a sudden crisis makes additional accommodations essential.

He is now planning to send Boston cases to the Harvard Infantile Hospital in Brighton and in addition has recourse, if occasion warrants, to the hospital on Gallup's Island.

Superintendent Dowling has applied for three additional nurses to augment his present staff of twenty, which is detailed exclusively to caring for infantile cases at the City Hospital.

The port physicians have ordered John Seaman, twenty-two, to be put under quarantine on the steamship Nacoochee, from Savannah, removed to the Chelsea Marine Hospital. He has a serious condition from infantile paralysis.

Charge Tramp Carried Infant Plague Germs

New York, Sept. 30.—Health authorities in New Jersey are searching for a tramp believed to have been a carrier of infantile paralysis germs, on the theory that his case provides the best evidence available that the disease is spread by adult human carriers.

It is believed the man transmitted the disease to three children of a farmer near Patterson, N. J., who at the outset of the plague had shut his family off from all outside communication.

The case is being studied by United States health officials.

The most rigid quarantine was established by the farmer as soon as he learned of the prevalence of infantile paralysis.

The tramp went to the place while the quarantine was on and was given employment. He slept in the barn, but was permitted to eat his meals in the house.

Soon after he left, three of the children were stricken with the disease.

HUSBAND OF MRS. LE DUC PROVES HIS LOVE IN GREATEST TEST

By DOROTHY DIX

Philadelphia, Sept. 30.—The recording angel must be opening up a new account with humanity these days. It is a credit account with the forgiving husband.

From time immemorial women have forgiven men their sins, and many a wife has fashioned of her love a cloak so broad that it covered not only her husband's transgressions, but hid them even from her own eyes.

Heretofore it has gone hard with erring women, but of late there have been several notable cases in which the husband accorded to his wife the same forgiveness that she has so long shown to men, and thrown about her, in bitter hours of need, the protection of his name and fame.

Chief among this little band of chivalrous and gallant husbands write down the name of Joseph C. Le Duc, of Chicago, who has rushed here to the bedside of his wife, who, down at midnight in a man's room, yet who proclaims his unfaltering faith in her innocence, and who has sent out to forgets well he will take her home, and all will be forgiven and forgotten.

TEST OF LOVE.

Yet few men have ever been called upon to face such a test of their love as has this ruddy-faced Chicago haberdasher, with the tan of the north shore golf links on his bronzed cheeks.

Imagine the situation.

Your fifteen years' wife and his wife have been married and in all that time have been singularly happy and devoted. They had no children and they remained lovers, as children couples often do. They were out-of-doors people and they golfed together, automobiled together and were chums in anything they did. Mrs. Le Duc is a handsome and brilliant and talented woman, blonde, more than average tall, with a superb figure. She is a fine athlete, she had studied for grand opera, and a year ago gave a concert in connection with Dadi, of the Chicago Grand Opera Company.

In addition she was domestic, a fine housekeeper and a devoted wife. And Mr. Le Duc loved her and admired her and was proud of her, and trusted her according to the worth of the good American husband.

MAKES TRIP EAST.

Then about two weeks ago Mrs. Le Duc came East to visit her sister. She wrote back affectionate, happy letters, and her husband was counting the days for her return.

And then, out of a clear sky, came the detective's telegram saying that the adored wife had been found in a man's room at midnight in a hotel in Philadelphia.

"I don't understand it, I can't explain how things happened as they did," says the husband, who has jumped out of the closet and began firing. That is the last she remembers. She used to know Graveur and his wife when we lived in New York ten years ago, but had not seen anything of him since his wife died, but we both regarded him as a friend."

"HELL HATH NO FURY."

So far as the main facts of the tragedy are concerned, it is that the death of two people and the dangerous wounding of a third are concerned, it is a case of mad jealousy and another illustration of the old adage that hell hath no fury like a woman scorned.

Joseph C. Graveur, owner of a garage in New York, had been the admirer of a woman by the name of Beiser for something like two years. She was separated from her husband and it is claimed by her family that he had promised to marry her when she got a divorce.

Graveur looked little like a romantic Lothario—he was fat, heavy jowled, physical. Women adored him such as he was Mrs. Beiser had set her heart upon him, and when he refused to marry her ordered her to get her divorce and showed those sympatoms of mania love that every woman knows, however much she may lie to her own heart about it, she went crazy with jealousy.

On Tuesday she called up his garage and was told that Graveur was in Washington. How she found out differently, how she located him so precisely, no one knows. It may be she phoned to Philadelphia and had some confederate locate him. More likely she knew that Graveur had no imagination even in love, and that if he had left New York in his high-powered car with another woman on a sentimental journey, he would almost surely take the same route and even go to the same hotels that he had gone to with her before he wearied her.

AVENGING FURY.

At any rate, straight as some avenging fury she came to the Hotel Walton in Philadelphia, found out to some inexplicable way the number of Graveur's room, and seeing herself as the chums to anything they did Mrs. Le Duc is a handsome and brilliant and talented woman, blonde, more than average tall, with a superb figure. She is a fine athlete, she had studied for grand opera, and a year ago gave a concert in connection with Dadi, of the Chicago Grand Opera Company.

In addition she was domestic, a fine housekeeper and a devoted wife. And Mr. Le Duc loved her and admired her and was proud of her, and trusted her according to the worth of the good American husband.

looking, and she begins to wonder if she could make a man fall in love with her again and how a real kiss, and not a duty kiss, would feel on one's lips.

Perhaps she begins a flirtation with a man and she gets interested with an idea of having a bit of romance once more in her life.

She doesn't really mean to do anything harmful. She still loves her husband and she does not intend to go too far, but it's playing with fire, and many a one is not able to control the conflagration she starts. And many another is burned no she smells of the smoke to her dying day.

I wonder if Mrs. Le Duc was a woman of this kind. A woman who pined for the excitement of the great adventure, and who through some strange justice is now called on to pay the price of that love that can be assessed against a woman.

For she is paying now for her folly, whatever it was, paying in shame, in remorse; perhaps she will pay with her life itself, for she is still in a critical condition with the bullet still in her breast.

But she has one comfort, husband whose love is big enough to blot out jealousy and suspicion and wounded pride and to forgive her.

And greater love than this hath no man.

TREPANNING LIKELY TO SAVE MAN'S LIFE

Trepanning the skull of Carl A. Anderson of East Boston, Dr. William Brickley of the Relief Station performed an operation in record time. Anderson was found unconscious in March Lane, an alley in the North End.

It was found that he had suffered a bad fracture of the skull and an operation was imperative to save his life. Dr. Brickley quickly performed it. Anderson's name was still on the dangerous list, but he had a chance of recovery, physicians said.

SUIT BROUGHT OVER WAR PROFITS

Harvey Wheeler of Concord has brought a bill in equity in the Supreme Court against Richard M. Long of Framingham, seeking an accounting of profits which he claims Long made by manufacturing uniforms for the British infantry. Judge Dolor Courey heard the bill. The case will go to the full bench on the question of whether, under a contract made by two men, Long had a right to estimate the profits concusively.

SPEND HONEYMOON AS MISSIONARIES

Announcement is made of the engagement of Miss Bessie Ham, principal of the Baltimore street school, Lynn, and Eugene Willard, of Nowgong, Assam, India. After their marriage Mr. Willard and Miss Hand will be ordained in the ministry, with a view to engaging in missionary work in India.

LOW FREIGHT RATES FOR SIX MONTHS

Massachusetts industries will have the advantage of another six months of low freight rates to the West and South, as the Interstate Commerce Commission has suspended the tariff schedules until April 3, for the proposed increased rates over the Boston & Albany, Central Vermont, New York Central, New Haven and the Eastern Steamship Corporation.

DEFENCE OPENS IN THE ROPER TRIAL

William G. Wilson, the attorney for Albert J. Roper, the man on trial in East Cambridge on a charge of murdering his father, Albert Roper, Tewksbury florist, made his opening address for the defence in the Middlesex County Court today.

Wilson pictured young Roper as a boy who loved his home, who loved flowers, and children. He made an impassioned plea for a fair consideration of the case, before calling his first witness.

Major Robert J. Crowley, deputy district attorney, who has conducted the State's case with the assistance of John Quinn, closed the State's case against Roper yesterday. He has rendered and examined about fifty witnesses.

MOTION OVERRULED.

W. H. Wilson of defendant's counsel moved that Judge Stevens, presiding, dismiss the case for lack of sufficient evidence. This was immediately overruled.

Today marks the end of two weeks of the trial. The defence has intimated they have scores of witnesses. It is predicted they will require at least three days to complete the testimony of these. Allowing each side a day for argument and summary will make the trial last a long time.

Testimony yesterday afforded no sensational relief, aided in throwing not lighter about the defendant. Chief among the witnesses called were members of the State police who investigated the crime soon after it was discovered and who examined Albert Roper upon his arrest and detention in Lowell jail. These were Superintendent Daniel Hurley, Sergeant O. Lowell, Sol Smith, Thomas Eustace and Edward Murtagh of the State Police. Also acquainted with Mrs. Mary A. Donoven, formerly Mrs. Fox's housekeeper, also testified, being the State's last witness.

MUNSTERBERG NOT PRESENT.

Professor Hugo Munsterberg, whose interest in the case was solicited by Attorney Wilson, attended all sessions of the trial the first week but has not been in attendance so far this week. It is believed that he will be called to the stand as a psychologist to explain why the accused wrote letters about his father's death and wearing crepe on his arm many days before his father's murder.

"Does it not stand to reason," asked the attorney, "that the very fact that Roper did wear the crepe and write of his father's death, proves conclusively that he couldn't have done it? Would the perpetrator of such a crime advertise it long in advance?"

These are two of the questions which may be propounded to Professor Munsterberg.

FUNERAL OF MARSHALL TODAY

The funeral of Frank Marshall of Boston, formerly head of the Jones & Marshall in the market district, who committed suicide with a revolver at his home, 1 Nahatan road, Brookline, will take place today at that address. It will be in charge of Rev. Dr. Lewis of the Arlington Street Church, of which he was a member.

Marshall came from Acton in his youth and had been in the commission business here for more than twenty-five years. He was about sixty-three years old. He had a wife and considerable means. His financial difficulties, the strange justice is now called on to pay, are said to be those that can be assessed against a woman.

For she is paying now for her folly, whatever it was, paying in shame, in remorse; perhaps she will pay with her life itself, for she is still in a critical condition with the bullet still in her breast.

But she has one comfort, husband whose love is big enough to blot out jealousy and suspicion and wounded pride and to forgive her.

DI COLA PAPERS MAY GIVE A CLEW

Investigation into the Di Cola case has been somewhat delayed owing to the serious condition of "Mrs. Di Cola." The police have every reason to think that when she is in condition to help them she will be able to explain certain things that have come to light through papers left by Di Cola.

Judge Frank Leveroni of the firm of Leveroni & Bailen, counsel for the Colonial Trust Company, which is named executor of Di Cola's will, spent much time examining the private letters and business communications, and made a report to the Brookline police. Just what information, if obtained has not been stated, but it was hinted that one of the letters might give the police the all-important clue to the murderer.

NO BLACK HAND.

"Mrs. Di Cola" was in bed most of yesterday and a physician called to attend her several times. Joseph N. Di Cola of Chicago, second cousin of the slain man, and his nineteen-year-old daughter are stopping at the Fairbanks street apartments. He intends to remain here for some time. Attorney Stephen A. Malato, who came to this city with the double purpose of determining if the murder was a result of black hand activities and of announcing that Gaspare Di Cola's brother, a wealthy macaroni manufacturer of Commiso, Sicily, had offered a reward of $5,000 for the arrest of the murderer, has returned to Chicago. He declared that Di Cola's death was not a result of black hand work.

Under the instruction of Attorney Malato, a search has been started for certain sources, the mother and cousin of Di Cola, for Marriano Bova, or Conti, to whom "Mrs. Di Cola" was engaged before his death, and from whom she secured a divorce last June. The Italian police believe that he may have come to this country.

Anthony Bova, son of "Mrs Di Cola" by her late husband, has been denied admittance to her apartments. His attorney, John F. McDonald, said that Bova had been greatly affected by the disclosure regarding his mother's life with Di Cola, made public by the fatality.

"Bova has been bothered and his wife scared by the investigations and newspapermen," he declared. "As a consequence of the way he has been disturbed he has gone to his farm in the Waltham barber shop, and this is a heavy misfortune to him for he has a children and wife and no way to support, and another child will be in the house soon. I have advised him to talk with Sergeant Rutherford of the Brookline police and Detective Ferrazzi of the Prince street station and to help them all he can. I know and you know and everybody else knows that the police of the country that Bova can give important information. The police are on the wrong track. The man who killed Di Cola was a man of small intelligence. If it was such intelligence as Bova's intelligence he would never have planned the murder the way the deed was planned and left a trail after the shooting, would be to get under cover as quickly as possible and stay there."

N. Y. CAR STRIKE AT POINT OF DEATH

By International News Service.

New York, Sept. 30.—Labor leaders after spending all day and night trying to breathe life into the general strike which they had promised New York, were forced to admit that it has been reorganized to the point of death. Unless there is a rally on Monday the death notice will be published officially.

Many hard blows were dealt the feeble child of the agitators. There was a meeting of the executive committee that the brewery drivers intend to return to work this morning and that the strike of the milk drivers is likely when L. G. Griffing of the International Association of Engineers said there can be no expectation of help from him.

Ernest Bohn unwittingly dealt an almost fatal stroke when he gave out what generally is regarded as an anti-strike statement.

To bring an eleventh hour rally, James H. Vahey, of Boston, counsel for the International Union, waved about his head a check for 50,000 of the union's funds for strike funds. The curative power of this was partly destroyed when it was learned it actually represented only one-third the sum due the strikers.

As the end approaches, there has been a gradual abandonment by the strikers' self - proclaimed friends. Those who last Friday when the infant strike was born cheered themselves hoarse, nothing is lonor lite and prosperity, today are absent from the Hotel Continental.

The final note of gloom was struck by Bohn in his statement earlier in which he said:

"You can't by sympathetic suspension of work in New York is a help to the strikers. Relief so far it is because of that. We are back to what was discouraged with the way things are. Today we are worse off than we were a week ago. Today we are a big change between now and Monday. The public does not understand the way these things were brought about as they were. I had information right yesterday that the building trades would go out, just a few held out, and that narrow minded element has stuck.

Union officials are careful about giving out figures. They referred all inquiries to their earlier estimates, which had about 200,000 men out.

Police Commissioner Woods announced that the department had been unable to learn of any shifting of the list of unions which have entered the sympathetic strike.

FIREMEN NOT TO GET ONE DAY OFF

The city council will kill the proposed amendment to the ordinances to allow the firemen one day off in three. This was learned at a meeting of the committee on ordinances, when Councilman Kenny, after announcing that he was opposed to the plan, declared that the council might be accused of "stalling" if there is further delay in settling the matter.

New Discovery Exceeds X-Ray

London, Sept. 30.—The British Medical Journal announces a remarkable scientific discovery now on trial at many of the casualty clearing stations in France.

The new discovery, says the Journal, appears to succeed just where X-ray photography fails. It gives clear pictures of structures, hidden far below the surface of the body, where X-ray photographs fail.

By means of this discovery it is possible to obtain pictures of any organ of the body, brain, liver, kidney and spleen, and to see by what means they are affected.

Thus it is possible to see blood vessels in the brain, to observe a blood clot there, to detect abscesses in the liver and wounds or pain in any organ.

The result is achieved by utilizing the currents of electricity, which the body is believed to generate.

Return Kidnaped Girl to Mother

Eleanor Haddle, the pretty little five-year-old Weymouth girl who has figured in the midnight kidnaping, involving all manner of legal difficulties in three States for more than a year, has been returned to her mother.

Tired and worn out from the long legal battle in the courts of Chicago and their journey East, Eleanor with her uncle, Dr. Leonard F. Wolf, arrived home at Sea street, North Weymouth.

"Mamma, don't let me go back to daddy again. I want to stay with you," sobbed the child, as she rushed into her mother's arms. While crowds of passengers looked on, Mrs. Haddle knelt in the centre of the platform and for five minutes the mother and daughter kissed, laughed and cried.

During the past year Eleanor's life has been surrounded with thrills. Stolen away from her home in Bridgeport, Conn., last October by James L. Brady, her father, she has been whisked over half of the country, hidden in a convent school, kidnaped a second time at midnight and finally given into the custody of her mother by Judge Kraszner in a Chicago court.

To Revolutionize Aviation Flights

By International News Service.

New York, Sept. 30.—An invention that will revolutionize aviation has been announced by John Wilson, brother of the President. The invention is the Macy Stabilizer. It will be given its first public demonstration in Hempstead Plains, L. I., on Saturday next.

The instrument is the invention of W. J. Macy, of Chester. It has been used in aeroplane fights on the Pacific coast and in the aviation corps of United States Army officers. According to Mr. Wilson it absolutely controls both the horizontal and lateral flight of an aeroplane. He declares two men can change places on an aeroplane while it is in flight in mid-air. The invention only weighs twenty pounds.

Daniels' School Is Wobbling

By International News Service.

Washington, Sept. 30.—Secretary Josephus Daniels' school for sailors on board the battleships appears about to die an untimely death. Naval officers say the next thing expected is an order either abolishing the school or modifying the obligation of the bluejackets to attend classes.

Already the system is beginning to sag at the corners. Sailors are exempted from attendance for one or two weeks previous to target practice. Officers say that since the novelty has worn off, the sailor men are kicking hard against the Daniels hobby, realizing that they are under no obligation instead of an invitation.

Woman Hit by Car Through High Heel

Manchester, N. H., Sept. 30.—A pair of high-heeled shoes that she was wearing were responsible for Miss Vivian Nichols, 28 years old, of No. 13 Brown avenue, sustaining a serious accident in this city today, when she was struck by an electric car when her foot became wedged in the track.

Miss Nichols stepped into the street to signal an approaching car bound for Nashua. Her high-heeled shoe became caught in the track and before she could remove her foot the car was struck by the fender of the car. She was taken to the Sacred Heart Hospital, where she is suffering from a bad gash on the head and possible internal injuries.

Tobacco Feeds Infant Trouble

By International News Service.

New York, Sept. 30.—If you are a smoker you have probably heard of Dr. Pease, president of the Non-smokers' League and arch-enemy of the cigarette.

Well, then, Dr. Pease and his favorite author, "Miss Annetta Haselton," have a little news for you.

Infantile paralysis, says Dr. Pease, is simply a form of tobacco poisoning. Infants in arms become infected through their tobacco-using parents he has informed the health department.

"Tobacco is a large contributing cause, if not the principal cause of poliomyelitis," adds Miss Haselton.

SAYS WIFE TOLD OF SEPARATION IN FICTION

By International News Service.

New York, Sept. 30.—Is Asta Asche "Olivia Standish?"

Is Herman T. Asche "Herman Kruger?"

Is the manuscript in Mrs. Asche's handwriting entitled "Justice," merely a bit of fanciful fiction, or is it in reality a confession of her true motives in carrying a millionaire?

These are the knotty problems that must be solved in the Supreme Court room in White plains in the marital troubles of Herman T. Asche, junior member of the importing firm of Von Bremen, Asche & Company, and his nineteen-year-old bride, Mrs. Asta O'Connor Asche, who is suing for separation.

SUING FOR SEPARATION.

Mrs. Asche, who has gained some fame as an esthetic dancer, is suing her husband for a separation. In reply, Gustav Lange, Jr., acting for Asche, has put in a counter claim for an annulment of the marriage, which occurred in this city March 27, last. The beautiful young dancer left her husband after a six weeks' honeymoon passed at the Ritz-Carlton, N. Y., and in a luxurious apartment at No. 435 Riverside Drive.

In her suit for separation spending the outcome of which she is receiving fifty dollars a week counsel for Asche makes serious charges against her husband and alleges that she never was legally married to him.

Asche, who is forty years old and a scion of one of New York's most illustrious families presented his claims in a voluminous mass of papers. The most remarkable of these, which is termed her "novelette confession."

JUST LIKE "CONFESSION."

In the "confession," written in Mrs. Asche's hand, is the story of "Olivia Standish's" married life. Strange to say the experiences of "Olivia" and of Asta are remarkably similar. In the "confession" Olivia returns to "Harold Miggian," a former lover.

Similarly, Asche alleges, when his slender dark-eyed young bride fled from him on May 8 last, she renewed her friendship with a young tenor well known in Brooklyn singing circles.

The husband denies his wife's assertions that she was a "kineless bride," and alleges that she consented to wife separation and intimacy from him. He declares:

In the first paragraph of the love letter the plot came to light and events occurred in real life that are the same as those in the novelette Olivia said she would sue her Herman for a separation and would make ugly charges against him and that she would win decisively. And, as all doctors, she would prove that while she had lived with me as a wife, she had been but a wife in name and was to me but a wife in reason.

Mrs. Asche is a daughter of Andrew O'Connor, famous Irish-American lawyer, who is known as the friend of United States Army officers. According to Mr. Wilson it absolutely controls both the horizontal and lateral flight of an aeroplane. He declares two men can change places on an aeroplane while it is in flight in mid-air. The invention only weighs twenty pounds.

MET WHEN SHE WAS NINE.

I met her first when she was nine years old. She was one of my friend, Emil Ile, in Norway. Mrs. Ille is her aunt. I loved her for years, but she was too young. My passion until she had become of age.

We were riotously happy after our marriage. She was the very picture of happiness. I was not disillusioned even after I caught her smoking dozens of cigarettes.

I spent thousands trying to cure her. She was the mistress of a handsome home, all of which is described in the novelette.

The day she left me—May 8—she kissed me as fondly as I thought she ever. That afternoon she disappeared, taking with her a lot of furniture and jewelry.

In July she sued for a separation, but I made no counter charges. Then she went to the Glen Springs sanitarium in Watkins Glen, N. Y. Only later part of August, she received a letter from me, a letter in which I said in part: "Tell Jack if he gets $5,000 for you that you'll give him $1,000."

Then I knew that I was the unfortunate victim of conspiracy. I believe she has been coached. Only a legal mind could have framed the plot that is revealed in the novelette.

MINISTER QUIETS MOB OF LYNCHERS

Nowata, Okla., Sept. 30.—Pleas of the Rev. Mr. Pierce, a Methodist minister, overcame the thirst for vengeance of a mob of 500 persons who had dragged a Negro through the streets and started to hang him from a tree in the parsonage yard. The attempted lynching came as the result of a shooting affray in which Deputy Sheriff James Gibson was shot and killed.

$8,000,000 FOR ROCKEFELLER IN ONE DAY

New York, Sept. 30.—The advance in Standard Oil issues added in a day more than $32,000,000 to the aggregate value of the Standard Oil Companies and $8,025,000 to the value of John D. Rockefeller's holdings on the assumption that they are now practically the same as they were on the dissolution of the company, as is indicated by the latest stock lists of the Standard Oil Company of New York.

One day's increase in the value of Mr. Rockefeller's holdings of Standard Oil of New Jersey alone amounted to $2,219,000.

Mr. Rockefeller's $306,879,258 worth of various Standard Oil stocks is distributed among the various companies into which the Standard Oil Trust has been dissolved.

DOUBLE U. S. DEBT.

The market value of all the Standard Oil subsidiaries at the close of trading was approximately $2,027,516,096. This is practically double the amount of the total debt of the United States government.

An examination of lists of stockholders in several of the subsidiary companies went to show that the major holdings in these concerns have not changed greatly since the owners of Standard Oil shares received their quota of subsidiary company stocks. Mr. Rockefeller's portion of Standard Oil of Indiana, for instance, was 75,540 shares after the company had declared its 2,900 per cent. stock dividend in March, 1912. Wallis Indiana Company's stockholders' list as of September, 1915, shows that 74,435 shares were still credited to him.

Mr. Rockefeller received stock of the Standard Oil Company of New York in the dissolution, which reached a total of 183,450 shares after the corporation increased its capital from $15,000,000 to $75,000,000.

The Standard of New York's stock list has Mr. Rockefeller down for 186,751 shares. It is possible that shifts have occurred in case of Mr. Rockefeller's holdings, and in those of other big share owners without an actual change of ownership. This would leave room for the supposition that actual holdings might either have been increased or decreased.

In case of the Rockefeller stock it is possible that some of the elder Rockefeller's shares may have been transferred to the name of John D. Rockefeller, Jr. The latter was the holder of about 650 shares of both Standard of Indiana and Standard of New York stock in the latest lists obtainable, while he did not appear in the records presented in the court proceedings before the dissolution.

$27,000,000 DIVIDENDS.

The Standard of Indiana, which was made famous by the fine of $29,000,000 imposed by Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis in Chicago, but which was not collected, has paid out in cash dividends since the separation of the companies approximately $27,000,000. Of this John D. Rockefeller, as owner of approximately one-fourth of the stock, received $6,800,000. Total dividend disbursements by the Standard of New York since Jan. 1, 1912, have amounted to $18,380,000, and of this amount $4,575,000 was gone to Mr. Rockefeller. The men associated with him in the old company have received dividends of the million from their shares in the subsidiaries.

These are some of the largest holders of Standard Oil of Indiana, the list showing both the number of shares held at the date of the latest available list of stockholders and the market value of these holdings at the close of trading yesterday:

J. D. Rockefeller	74,988	$59,941,400

TRAIL SUSPECTS IN ATTACKS ON GIRLS

Convinced that a maniac is the person responsible for the series of attacks upon young women in Roxbury, three of which have occurred within a week, the police are now shadowing several suspected persons, with an arrest likely soon.

The description furnished by Miss Mary Webber, the latest victim of the man who has terrorized the women of Roxbury, tallies closely with the stories but meagre descriptions that have been furnished by the other victims.

Miss Webber says the man who attacked her last night on Parker street, Roxbury, and who was driven away by the approach of two men, was five feet ten inches in height and weighed about 150 pounds.

He was dressed in a light suit of clothes, much the worse for wear, wore tan shoes and a cap that was pulled down over his face, evidently with the intention of hiding his features.

THICK, HUSKY VOICE.

She told the police today that he spoke in a thick, husky voice. She did not believe the man to be a negro at the time of the attempted attack, but the police are convinced that it is a light-colored mulatto, and the same man who is believed to have been responsible for the other attacks.

Miss Webber was passing a vacant lot on Parker street, near Longwood avenue, Roxbury, when she was attacked by an unknown man. She struggled in his grasp and screamed for help.

Two men ran to her aid and the man released her and took flight. In her struggles she succeeded in making the man drop a false mustache. She was not injured and went directly to her home at No. 19 Conant street.

Miss Webber is the third woman who has been attacked in a week. In the last few months several other women have been attacked. One woman died last December as the result of a blow she received.

Saturday night Miss Margaret Nevins of Linden avenue was struck down. She has furnished the best description of the man the police have yet secured. Miss Nevins describes him as a white man, who spoke good English with a slight foreign accent. She was also able to give a good personal description of the man.

GIRL IS ROBBED.

Miss Celia Weinstock is still ill as the result of the attack on her last Sunday evening, when an unknown man struck her down with an iron weapon. She was dragged across Perrin street, within calling distance of her own home, and thrown in the yard of the Sarah J. Baker school. While she was unconscious from the effects of the blow she was robbed.

The first attack was made last December, when Mrs. Sarah Haynes was the victim in her own home. The effects of the attack caused her death.

The attack on Miss Weinstock has been the most serious so far. She had spent the afternoon at Winthrop and on her return walked down Alaska street, turning into Perrin street.

POSSE GETS NEGRO IN A SWAMP HUNT

By International News Service.

Charleston, S. C., Sept. 30.—Henry Lewis, a negro, who shot N. J. Allsbrooks, a rural policeman, eight days ago, was killed by a posse after one of the most sensational man hunts in the history of the State. Bloodhounds and scouts trailed him through the swamps for six days. He opened fire on the posse from ambush, but was riddled with bullets before anyone came within range.

WAR SUMMARY

There was little fighting of importance anywhere in the war areas during the period chronicled in today's official reports.

On the Somme front the British have somewhat extended their gains northward. At no point, however, have these attacks even approached an important success. It seems probable, however, that a strong push northeastward toward Bapaume may shortly develop, in an effort to fold back the German line at this point.

Aside from the Somme front, there was heavy fighting in the Florina region. The Bulgarians have taken the offensive there, vigorously, but vainly, attacking the Serbian positions in this region. Perhaps the entry of Greece—if Greece enters—will be the signal for the allied drive.

The Rumanians have renewed their efforts to capture Hermannstadt, in Transylvania—without success. In the Dobrudja, fighting is at a standstill.

The Russian and the other fronts were marked by local enterprises of not even minor importance.

FIRST BLOW BY U. S. IN BRITISH TRADE WAR

By International News Service.

Washington, Sept. 30.—The Department of State has struck the first retaliatory blow at Great Britain because of the United Kingdom's restrictions on American trade.

Because of England's restrictions on imports of spirituous liquors from the United States Secretary of State Lansing has notified customs officials to apply the same restrictions to spirits from Great Britain and her dominions when shipped to this country. Authority forthe step was given in the pure food and drugs act.

Great Britain restricts the importation of spirits that have not been warehoused for at least three years. The Department of Agricultural announced today that on orders of the State Department the same rule will be applied by the United States after December 1, on exports from Great Britain.

BRITAIN USES AMERICAN VESSELS

By International News Service.

Washington, Sept. 30.—Great Britain is using the Wagner Company's three ships, the Hocking, Genesee and Kanawha, in the coast wise passenger trade, according to information received by the State Department. She has not even set a date for hearing in the prize court concerning the wholly American-owned vessels she arbitrarily seized eight or nine months ago. In the meantime Britain is reaping benefits from the ships and depriving American shipping of so much tonnage. The ships are entirely American-owned.

WOUNDED PRISONERS ARE BEING KILLED

By International News Service.

Paris, Sept. 30.—The charge that Bulgarian troops are slaughtering wounded Serbians is made in an official statement given out by the Serbian government through the War Office. The report says: "We still hold the highest summit of Kajmackalan. The Bulgars have massacred wounded prisoners. This fact has been observed by our troops at Kajamackalan."

MORGAN GOES TO FLOAT NEW LOAN

By International News Service.

New York, Sept. 30.—J. P. Morgan has booked passage for Liverpool on the American line steamship New York, which sails at noon today. Although secrecy was maintained at Mr. Morgan's office as to his plans, it was whispered in financial circles that he is going to float another British loan, probably for $250,000,000, supported by collateral consisting mainly of American securities.

CAPT. EDES NAMED FOR THE COMMISSION

Newport, N. H., Sept. 30.—Captain S. H. Edes, whose command is now in Texas, is to be named as one of the delegates to the International Irrigation Congress at El Paso, October 14-18, President Wilson is to attend the first day for the dedication of the Elephant Butte dam, and it was suggested by friends of the captain here that it would be quite a compliment to the young soldier to receive the designation so he could meet the President.

GREECE BALKS TO BE SURE OF TERRITORY

By International News Service.

London, Sept. 30.—Greece is reported haggling with the entente over certain terms before she takes the final action which will bring her into the war against the central powers.

This information is contained in a dispatch from Rome, which quotes the well informed newspaper Messagero. It is stated that Greece has asked the allies if they are still disposed to make all concessions promised for Greece's co-operation at the time of the Balkania pact.

Greece some time since announced the annexation of Northern Epirus, being at that time in close touch with Germany. This section, which is in Southern Albania, also is believed to be desired by Italy and for that reason Greece apparently is determined to know just where she stands before committing herself finally.

ALLIES HAVE UPPER HAND.

The allies hold the upper hand in the situation, however, and with Constantine face to face with war or revolution, his action, it is believed, cannot be delayed.

No word has been received of the action taken at the Crown Council at which the ultimatum to Bulgaria was to be completed. Dispatches are anxiously awaited here.

Meanwhile the revolution is spreading by leaps and bounds. Not only has the Greek warship Hydra been added to the list of vessels which join the allied fleet in Salamis Bay, but the Kilkis, formerly the United States battleship Missouri, also is reported to have deserted. The Greek Ministry of Marine denies this and the minister has expressed the deepest regret over the defection of the Hydra.

HYDRA STOLEN.

According to stories, the Hydra was practically stolen by the revolutionists, though with the consent of her commander, an enthusiastic Venizelist.

At an early hour in the morning, silent men put out in a rowboat to where the Hydra was anchored under the guns of the Piraeus arsenal, and climbing on board threatened the guard at the deck and the watch officer with death if they made a sound.

All the ship's officers not in sympathy with the revolution were put overside in small boats and two tugs, which had been ordered to come at a given hour, hooked onto the big warship and silently drew her out of the harbor.

See German Fears In Hollweg's Speech

By FRANK TEWSON,
Staff Correspondent of International News Service.

London, Sept. 30.—The speech of Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, the German Chancellor, is regarded here as an admission that Germany has met defeat. Dr. von Bethmann Hollweg's words, implying that ruthless submarine warfare is to be launched are taken to clinch this opinion.

Germany has held her submarine fleet as the final weapon to be launched when all else failed, and, despite the boast that the German liners will hold, the Chancellor's reference to submarines shows that fear has begun to eat into the heart of the German government in the minds of English leaders.

Such responsible newspapers as the Times and the Chronicle, in analyzing the Reichstag speech, see in it a reflection of official pessimism.

The Chronicle declares that Germany sees all hope of winning gone, and that she realizes she cannot emerge victorious from the final of battle. The only question is how much longer can Germany last.

New York, Sept. 30.—William H. Hotchkiss, former Progressive State chairman, has announced that he will not serve as one of the six Progressive electors tentatively selected by the Republicans at Saratoga.

At the same time it became known through friends of Mr. Hotchkiss that prominent Progressives were afraid of a plot to "steal the Progressive party in New York state and hold it for barter and sale."

PEACE SAID TO BE PLAN OF VON BULOW

By GABRIEL HANOTAUX.
Former Foreign Minister of France.

Paris, Sept. 30.—The author of all the intrigues against the German Chancellor, Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, is Prince von Bulow, who is seeking to become Chancellor in order to make the best possible peace for Germany at the earliest moment.

Bethmann-Hollweg' is the sole remaining member of the Nationalist clique who has not been disgraced since the war began. He covers the Kaiser.

Prince von Bulow's object in provoking his call is to resume the traditional policy of consigning the Kaiser to the back ground. He is using the imperial Secretary of the Treasury, Dr. Helfferich, as his puppet, but is pulling the strings himself.

Von Bulow is also fooling the Pan-Germans, inducing them to help him to return to power by promises of a greater war which he has no intention of fulfilling.

Once again Chancellor he will quickly drop the firebrands and begin peace manoeuvres.

Germany's present political leaders have issued orders to the general staff and newspapers to conceal the country's deplorable military situation from the public, but the soldiers know the truth.

I am in possession of a letter from a leading soldier, written to another soldier, who fell recently on the Somme. It says:

My military ambitions have fallen below zero. I prefer to return to Germany alive to falling on the field of honor. A hero's death does not attract me. The illusions under which we started the war are all gone, except for a few which are disappearing little by little. Our only problem now is to end this terrible bleeding process and snatch whatever small compensation we can from the war.

BREMEN BUOY ASHORE AT PORTLAND

Portland, Sept. 30.—Bearing on both sides, the plainly stenciled name, "Kremen," in bold, black letters two inches long, a doughnut-shaped buoy was found floating in the water at Fort Williams, Cape Elizabeth, at the entrance of Portland Harbor, by Frederick Lakeman, a ten-year-old boy of Westbrook.

The finding of the life preserver serves to strengthen the belief already growing in shipping circles that the German undersea merchantman has met with disaster.

The buoy was found in a small cove, the boy walking out in water up to his waist. He brought it ashore and not until he had shown it to friends did he realise the importance of his find.

Besides the word Bremen there appears on one side only the German words "Shuts-marke," meaning "Patented" or "Trademark." Under this is a small crown and below that the name of the maker, "V. Epping Hoven" and the name of the German naval base, "Wilhelmshafen," spelled in that way.

CLAMP LID DOWN IN WATERVILLE

Waterville, Me., Sept. 30.—Waterville is tighter than a drum, the lid being clamped down with a bang by order of City Marshal Frank D. Robinson. The order came as a surprise to the local dealers as well as to the whole city. By this ruling a number of the hotels who have been putting out "wet goods," as well as the open bars, will be affected.

Ask Prayers for Sunday Success

The Rev. Charles L. Page, chairman of the "Billy" Sunday campaign prayer meeting committee, has issued a proclamation for prayer to all of the people of Boston and New England to make successful the campaign, which is to open on the Huntington avenue grounds on November 12.

As tomorrow has been proclaimed "Prayer Sunday" by the committee and all of the ministers connected with the campaign have been asked to co-operate by paying marked attention to it at the forenoon and evening services, the proclamation for prayer will be read.

The tabernacle will be completed in time for the campaign. Nearly all of the benches have been installed and a number of the forms for the orchestra for the rostrum and the choir are ready. In addition to this concrete work the bases for the twenty-eight stoves, to be distributed about the auditorium, are in place.

White Slave Note in Bottle

"I am a prisoner on the boat Nellie. Please help me. Mary Castello." was the note found enclosed in a bottle by Edward Ruhin, a thirteen-year-old boy living at No. 61 London street, East Boston. The boy was playing about one of the wharfs on Border street, when he saw a bottle, and fished it out.

The police are trying now to locate some boat by the name Nellie, and determine whether or not it is a Boston boat. This makes the second "white slave" case that has come to the notice of the police of Boston in the last day or two, as the Utica police have notified them to be on the lookout for another girl, who threw a note out of the train at Caseville, N. Y. So far nothing has been discovered in either case.

Retires After 37 Years.

After more than thirty-seven years of service in the police department, Lieutenant George E. Saxton, inspector of carriages, has been retired at his own request by Commissioner O'Meara. He will receive a half-pay pension amounting to $1,000 a year. He is sixty-three years old.

BAY STATE TROOPS READY FOR HIKE

By BERT FORD.

El Paso, Tex., Sept. 30.—News that the Second Massachusetts Regiment at Columbus, New Mexico, had been ordered home encouraged the men of the Fifth, Eighth and Ninth Regiments today. The impression was strong throughout the Massachusetts brigade that the starting of an infantry regiment indicated largely movement of all the Bay State foot troops.

But the Fifth, Eighth and Ninth first faces that fittest-day hike which is scheduled to get under way tomorrow, and they do not relish it with the boys from the western part of the State packing for the homeward journey. There is talk today that the hike might be shortened for absolutely all other, but orders did not bear out the speculation.

The hospital corps has received word to return all invalids in condition to duty and to send others from the brigade camps to the camp hospital at Fort Bliss. This meant the ridding of camp of disabled men in preparation for the road and field work mapped out for the next fortnight.

The change in weather has brought out woolen underwear and olive drab woolen uniforms and overcoats to substitute the cotton uniforms worn all summer. Horses and mules were shod and shoes were issued to the men.

Men of the First Field Artillery were jubilant over the report in local newspapers that their regiment was to be among the first sent home. Colonel Fiske here will remain in camp in order to lead the first battalion in target work and Lieutenant-Colonel Davis will command the second battalion in the hike.

Troops C and M of Rhode Island are packed a second time to go home, but today was a toss a toss whether they would go or be asked to unpack again and take part in the hike.

TELEPHONE GIRL AN ACTOR'S BRIDE

Emma C. Griffin, a Lynn telephone operator, is today the bride of George Evans Ashton, an actor of New York. The ceremony took place in the rectory of the Holy Cross Cathedral. Plans for the wedding had been kept secret. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Charles C. Cassion of No. 121 Franklin street, Lynn.

The Allies' New War Monster

The "famous cheese-box on a raft" that revolutionized naval warfare may have its land counterpart, editorial observers are noting, in the new British traveling forts, or land monitors, nicknamed "tanks" and "Willies" by the "Tommies."

In THE LITERARY DIGEST for September 30th the leading article gives a clear description of these new "super-dreadnoughts" of the land, illustrated, including a map showing where the "tanks" first went into action causing, according to General Haig, "indescribable demoralization in the enemies' ranks."

GIRL TELLS OF ABDUCTION AND SLAVERY

By International News Service.

New York, Sept. 30.—Adam Barr of Unionport is held in the Atlantic Highlands, N. J., police court in $2,000 bail on a technical charge of abduction.

Sadie Bayley, the pretty fourteen-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Horace Bayley, told a tearful story in the Jersey courtroom.

With Barr's arraignment was revealed the story of the girl's disappearance and her recovery by her brother and sister after they had gained entrance by a ruse to the place where she was held prisoner. In his arrest the police believe an important link in the white slave chain of criminal offenses in New Jersey has been uncovered.

LEFT FOR CHURCH.

Sadie Bayley disappeared from her home in Atlantic Highlands last Sunday. She left there to attend the Baptist church and did not return home. According to her own story she went to Water Witch, a nearby resort, where she was met by Barr. The man, she said, had sent her candy and treated her to soda, and had promised to marry her.

Barr, she said, proposed a trip to New York. The pair went from Water Witch to Long Branch, where they boarded a train for New York, she asserted. Barr offered her some more candy, she declared, an dafter eating it she became dizzy and lost consciousness, she said. When she recovered her senses she was in a Brooklyn hotel.

She could not recall the name of the hotel, Barr, she said, was with her.

PUT ON OLD CLOTHES.

The next morning she said they went to No. 2019 Haviland avenue, Unionport, where Barr, she alleged, said a Mrs. Cameron, his sister, lived.

The girl had previously told her mother that Barr brought her to a room at Bryant avenue and One Hundred and Seventy-ninth street, between the time in the Brooklyn hotel and the journey to the Haviland avenue address. Barr, she said, ruined her to disrobe and put on old clothes in place of her new garments. The man left her, saying he was going to get a marriage license, but returned and said her age prevented his getting it, she said.

No doubt there would be other girls brought to the house, Sadie said she was told by Barr. But she was to pay no attention to them. After the war, she alleged he told her, they would go to Scotland and be married.

FOUND BY RUSE.

Mrs. Elizabeth Mathews and John Bayley, sister and brother of the girl, complained to the New York police headquarters. On Thursday, acting on information gathered at Water Witch, they went to the Haviland avenue house. Bayley engaged Barr in conversation. It is said, offering him employment, while his sister slipped inside the house. She ran upstairs and found Sadie washing dishes. The girl ran to her crying:

"Oh, Lizzie, take me away from here. I hate this man. He made me come here against my will."

Mrs. Mathews led her sister downstairs and confronted Barr, it is charged. He is said to have acknowledged his guilt. John Bayley drew a pistol, it is alleged, and compelled Barr to return to New Jersey with him.

GALVIN BURIAL IN WORCESTER TODAY

Funeral services for C. O'Connell Galvin, veteran newspaperman and member of the AMERICAN staff, who died Thursday night at St. Elizabeth's Hospital, took place today in Worcester, for many years his home before coming to Boston.

A large delegation of friends from Boston attended. The funeral was held from the funeral parlors of James A. Athy & Son, No. 28 Trumbull street, with a high mass at St. Ann's Church.

Burial was in St. John's Cemetery, Worcester.

The bearers were John O'Brien, J. F. H. Mooney, Daniel Downey, J. Colby Adams, William J. Larkin, Herbert M. Sawyer, Dr. Thomas J. Barrett, Patrick J. McKeon, Judge Philip J. O'Connell, John A. McGowan, William H. O'Onan, Eugene A. Garvey, Captain Walter N. Dreher, Matthew R. Lamb, Jeremiah J. Sullivan and Mark H. Crehan.

The ushers were William E. Plummer, Francis McKeon, Thomas J. Marrahy and John J. Harahy.

The requiem mass was celebrated by the Rev. John J. McCoy, D. D.

Mr. Galvin's death was due to acute uraemic poisoning, and caused profound sorrow among his many friends. He was stricken Monday night at his home, No. 86 Orchard street, Cambridge. His body was taken to Worcester yesterday afternoon.

Irish League Men Add Their Sympathy.

The executive committee of the Boston Central Branch of the United Irish League met at the headquarters, in the Globe Building, to take action on the death of their late fellow member, C. O'Connell Galvin, of the AMERICAN, who died Thursday night. Those present were: Michael J. Jordan, Colonel Roger P. Scannell, Andrew Trahey, Denis A. Scannell, Patrick J. Slane, Michael Maynes, Augustine J. Daly, Charles J. O'Malley and James T. Barrett. In the absence of the president of the Central Branch, Dr. H. V. McLaughlin, Mr. Daly presided.

Resolutions on Mr. Galvin's death were adopted and it was voted to send a floral harp to his home. Mr. Galvin's body having been taken to Worcester yesterday, it was not possible for a delegation to call at the house, but the following were appointed to attend the funeral this morning at St. Anne's Church, Worcester: Michael J. Jordan, Charles J. O'Malley, Augustine J. Daly, James T. Barrett and Colonel Scannell.

The resolutions adopted, after briefly rehearsing the events of Mr. Galvin's life, concluded: "Be it resolved, That we, the members of the Central Branch of the United Irish League of Boston, place on record our sense of the great loss which this organization has sustained in Mr. Galvin's death. Resolved, That we tender to his bereaved family our heartfelt sympathy."

Mr. Galvin was for several years secretary of the Boston Central Branch of the League and understood the Irish question perhaps better than any other Irishman in Boston.

BOY RESCUED FROM ROOF; LOSES NERVE

Attracted by cries from the roof of a house on Wright street, Stoneham, Patrolman John J. O'Brien climbed a waterspout and rescued twelve-year-old William West, perched on the ridgepole. In the absence of his parents, William tried to climb the roof. His nerve failed him when it came time to descend.

IDENTIFY BODY BY X-RAY OF BIG TOE

Haverhill, Sept. 30.—An X-ray photograph of the right great toe of that of the missing man. No other marks of identification had been observed on the body.

Joseph C. Clausen of Cambridge, who disappeared from his home on August 1, last, enabled the Haverhill police to identify the body found floating six weeks ago in the Merrimac River as Clausen's body, which has been buried for six weeks in the city cemetery. It will be exhumed and taken to the Holy Cross Cemetery, Malden, for interment.

Yankees in Final Game at Red Sox Day at Fenway

By JOHN W. MORAN, JR.

Under ordinary conditions one might expect that Bill Carrigan would hurl "Dutch" Leonard this afternoon, but conditions today are not ordinary. Yesterday a southpaw looked none too good against the Yankees and it wouldn't cause much of a surprise if Manager Bill were to work Long Ernest Shore. Be it remembered Shore opened the series with a win. He's had two days' rest and should be able to repeat.

Just whom Donovan will pitch is more or less problematical. Either Ray Fisher or Nick Cullop would appear to be the right guess, though it may be that Urban Shocker will be called back. In these days of close fighting and times, when no manager relishes having it said he laid up a hurler to benefit another club, "Wild Bill" is more or less at ends to understand exactly what to do.

There's no question but "Wild Bill" is out there battling to get as many ball games as he possibly can. Mr. Lannin used to be his boss at Providence, but that doesn't cut any ice in this case. Hughie Jennings used to boss Donovan at Detroit, and Management is about even. Hughie cannot land this year and it appears very much as though Mr. Lannin will. However, Bill won't take any chances. He's in there to give the public the best his club has and consequently nobody can expect favors at his hands.

WANT TICKETS FOR SERIES.

"Fans" who have wondered about the pennant matter can sit back and figure out exactly this: If the Red Sox win two more games, regardless of what Chicago does, the pennant is theirs. With the Athletics here Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday in a series of three games, it looks very much as if Carrigan had the pennant won now.

Applications for World's Series tickets by the score are being received at the club offices and it appears as if the stand at Braves Field would be sold out soon. Persons who desire seats for the big clash will do well to address their applications to the Boston American League Baseball Company, Fenway Park, Jersey street, Boston, at once. Do not pick out any particular individual to address them to. Just send them to the club and you'll be registered in the order received.

This is the day that "fans" have set aside as Red Sox Day. It should be an occasion which all hands will seize to pay homage to one of the gamest organizations of ball players the grand old sport has known. The bunch, minus it but the 1914 Braves, has had anything on Bill Carrigan's band for nerve and dash under great odds. Manager Bill has led his club through a mighty battle and Boston fandom owes it to them to go to Fenway Park today and applaud their work.

CLINCH FLAG TODAY.

Today the Red Sox may clinch the pennant by winning, but to do so they must receive a veritable mountain of aid from the Cleveland club. Should the Indians flatten the White Sox in the pair of games scheduled there wouldn't be much to it but a Red Sox win. However, if the Yanks can make a rare this Fall, he said he was not sure, but hardly thought so.

In line with an old policy, Ries said he will get the men out early this year and give them a good stretch of machine work before Christmas. He spent part of the Summer with Joe Wright, of Pawtucket, who is now at Toronto, where Wright is postmaster. Wright even induced him to try a hand at their pins, but failed to convince him that they were the best things to use in winning crews were a coach's objective.

Early Start for Columbia Crew

New York, Sept. 30.—Jim Rice, head coach of rowing at Columbia, arrived at Morningside Heights after spending the Summer at Lake Lonely and Toronto. When asked if Columbia would row Yale a rare this Fall, he said he was not sure, but hardly thought so.

In line with an old policy, Ries said he will get the men out early this year and give them a good stretch of machine work before Christmas. He spent part of the Summer with Joe Wright, of Pawtucket, who is now at Toronto, where Wright is postmaster. Wright even induced him to try a hand at their pins, but failed to convince him that they were the best things to use in winning crews were a coach's objective.

Tight N. L. Race Holds Up Solons

Chicago, Sept. 30.—Because of the tightening up of the pennant race in the National League, no official information on the World's Series will be given out until next week, it was said at American League headquarters.

The meeting of the National Commission, which was expected to take place this week for the purpose of arranging the schedule, has been postponed until early next week.

The members of the commission are to assemble in New York to await the outcome.

EXPECT 40,000 AT GAMES

Giants' Management Anticipates New Attendance Record for New York at Today's Twin Bill.

New York, Sept. 30.—Weather permitting, the Braves and Giants will clash in a double-header at the Polo Grounds this afternoon. If that old scallywag, Jupiter Pluvius, does not prevent the big show, the indications are that Thursday's mob—25,000—will again jam the Harlem baseball palace; in fact, the club is looking for a turnout of 40,000.

Yesterday's postponed combat cannot be played off, as the Braves get through their season's work here today. The cancellation of this contest means the Giants, who have bagged their last twenty-five games and promises to keep on their sensational streak until the race is over, are mathematically out of the rocking and the pennant fight is reduced to the Dodgers and Phillies, with the Braves having a small look-in at best.

TOUGH FOR MR. McGRAW.

The Giants had a lead by one run yesterday when a halt was called in the last half of the fourth inning. They had a runner on base and one out.

Both Reulbach and Ferritt were pitching good ball. Reulbach had been touched for two singles and a double. The latter hit, assisted by a pass, scored the run for the Giants in the third. Ferritt only gave two hits, a single and a double, up to the time the game was called off.

Arrangements for the outpouring of the biggest crowd in the history of organized baseball in this city have been completed for the double-header between the Braves and the Giants at the Polo Grounds this afternoon.

LOOK FOR RECORD CROWD.

An official of the local club said that he expected at least 40,000 at the grounds, which marks the last appearance of the Boston aggregation in this city this season.

The reserve section has already been sold out, along with the boxes. Extra seats have been placed in the field, and additional chairs will be put down on each of the aisles.

Allen for the Braves and Benton for the Giants are the selections for the opening event. In the second game Perritt and Reulbach, who started yesterday's game, will probably oppose each other again.

Weinert to Meet Moha Oct. 12

New York, Sept. 30.—According to the mandate of the National Athletic Commission the Show Corporation will have to stage the Bob Moha-Charley Weinert bout before any other affairs are staged at the Garden. This will necessitate the postponement of the Frank Moran tussle with Fred Fulton.

It is the intention of Jolmes Johnston, manager of the Garden, to put on Moha and Weinert on October 12, the date selected for the Moran-Fulton fracas. The latter bout will be staged on October 25.

AZEVEDO ON IN NEW YORK

New York Sept. 30.—"Silent" Martin, middleweight, will face "Battling" O'Hagan, of Albany, at the Broadway Sporting Club to-night. Willie Schaefer will go against Joe Azevedo, the Portuguese, and Sammy Diamond and Benny Volger, former amateur champion, will mix at the Fairmont Club.

WILL RUN AT BROCKTON.

Harvard is to enter four members of its cross-country team in the three-mile run at the Brockton Fair next Thursday. Dana Hutchinson, captain of the 1919 team, Hal Bechtel, George King and Cook are the men who are to compete.

COLONELS SURE OF FLAG.

Louisville, Ky., Sept. 30.—Louisville has clinched the American Association pennant. If the team loses its three remaining scheduled games, all with Toledo, it still will have a lead over Indianapolis, its nearest contender.

AMATEURS AT ARENA.

The Armory A. A. announces that it will put on an amateur boxing show at the Arena October 16. There will be bouts in the 115, 125 and 135-pound classes, open, and two special numbers. Entries can be made with Edward F. Walsh, care the Armory A. A.

By HUGH S. FULLERTON

This is the doggondest funniest dope I ever encountered.

When you find a shortstop who is of nearly as much value to his team as a defensive player as he is on the offensive, you think you have a weak man. This stands to reason, because, as we have seen, the offensive part of baseball is 62 per cent. of the game and the defensive is only 38 per cent. Besides that, the shortstop—or any one man—is only one factor of the defensive strength of a team.

Yet here are three shortstops, studied carefully and seriously with a view of getting at their worth as individuals in the coming series; studied as against the kind of pitching they will have to face, and not one of the three is worth much more to his team as a batter than as a fielder. It is uncanny.

The three all figure as pretty fair hitters and run getters in their own leagues—not great, of course, but strong enough to count on them winning a game now and then. Olson is the leading slugger of the three, and he is pounding the pellet for about .250, while his rivals are down there fighting to keep above the .200 mark. In the batting averages, Smith Scott and Bancroft associate regularly with the pitchers, and Scott looks like a comparative hitter when compared with the hitting of his own pitchers.

BOTH BRILLIANT FIELDERS.

Scott and Bancroft are the two greatest fielding shortstops in the world, barring Maranville who, this season, is the most improved ball player I ever have seen. Olson, of course, is not their equal in the defensive part of the game although their superior in attack.

In an average season against all pitchers as they come, these men, with the exception of Olson, look pretty weak, but set them up against World's Series twirling—pit them against the pick of the best teams of the opposing league and they do not figure to do much except to take their swings and help fill out some heights.

Olson is the only possible one of the three who appears to have a chance of turning himself into a hero. Of the three, I would pick Bancroft as the most dangerous man in a pinch. He cannot hit much, but he is the kind of a poor hitter who is just as likely to bat Walter Johnson all the way down to hit a dub. He swings and hits at the ball and, if it is aimed at his bat he has busy it.

Scott is a very weak sister with the wagon, when considered from a World Series angle. It is a cinch he has been pulling for Brooklyn to win the National League pennant because he will stand much more show of making base hits against their pitchers than he would against either the Philadelphia or Boston Braves' hurlers.

In fact, victory for Brooklyn ought to have been the desire of all fans, because Brooklyn is a team of power and uncertain team, with in and out batting affairs and, be sure of their pitching, and one is about as much of a cinch as the other. Give a club faces even a much stronger one. A team may walk up the hills out of the Dodgers, but the action will be there, and that makes for exciting baseball—a thing too scarce in the World's Series of these modern days.

OLSON IMPROVED PLAYER.

Olson is a player who has improved a great deal since he got with the Brooklyn outfit. He is not brilliant, but he is a hard worker and a willing and enthusiastic one this year—which will be quite a surprise to the Cleveland crowd which considered him a bone and not much of an enthusiast. The scent of victory seems to have spurred him along to greater efforts. He does not figure to do much slugging against the Red Sox pitchers, but he is more fortunate than some National League shortstops would be, in that he figures fairly well against left handers. Scott, of course, looks better against Brooklyn than against the Phils.

Of the three, Bancroft is much the better in defensive work. In fact, this fellow is one of the really great shortstops of all time, as a defensive man. He has improved this season even over his work of last year when he was the sensation of the National League. He is steadier, shows more brains and works better with the men alongside him. Especially has he helped the rather weak partner to his left.

His work at short is the nearest approach of that of Mike Doolan in his palmiest days that Doolan's ability ever has seen. I would, of course, rate Walter Maranville above him as a ball player because of his fighting, aggressive brilliancy, but there is no star in the "Rabbits" class.

SCOTT STAR DEFENSIVE PLAYER.

Scott is a fast, brilliant and nervy ball player who holds a job on a championship team because of his fielding and defensive work in the infield. He is a tremendous help to Barry and works with him as did Eddie Collins. He does not work so well the other way, save in going back of third, and in that direction he covers an immense amount of ground.

I have criticised him some in the past for failure to come in for the slow, high bounders, but then he plays deep and relies upon Gardner to cut across, and when Gardner does his part that omission is not observed.

Olson is the worst fielder of the three, but not a bad one. I fear that he will not look as well against the Red Sox as he does in his regular season's work, because the Red Sox are almost certain to hit the ball fiercely during the coming series, and whether they hit it safe or not they make infielders hustle to cut off their drives or cripple them with their hot smashes.

It is to be observed that many infielders are made to look like stars when the pitching is good, who appear to be duds when the other team is lighting upon the ball.

In a world's series, when pitching is good, the value of offensive work rises in inverse ratio to the lightness of the hitting, so do not be surprised if the figures show a player far below his work would rate him in a regular season and perhaps considerably above what we would rate him as a defensive player. In one of these close, light-hitting games a great stop may be of as much value as a long hit.

Tomorrow we will dope the third baseman, finishing the trio of figuring the regulars of the teams. After that we will get down to the brass tacks—for remember that in a world's series catching and pitching count more even than they do in a regular season.

CANCEL 5 SCHOOL GAMES

Poor Condition of Elevens Causes Postponements; Needham High Battles Waltham Boys Today.

The schoolboy football calendar was given an upset this morning when five of today's games were cancelled. The reason for the sudden cancellations was because of the hot weather the past few days preventing the teams from getting into their proper condition. The games called off follow:

Providence Tech at Waltham.
Huntington at Medford.
Arlington at Salem.
Winthrop at Malden.
Wakefield at Rindge Technical.

Although some of the above teams were forced to cancel with their scheduled opponents they will play just the same. The Waltham High eleven will lineup against a team composed of Waltham High graduates. It is to be played in order that the Watch City boys will get a good stiff workout.

Malden this morning arranged a game with Needham which should be well worth seeing. The Needham team this season is a good one and last week scored a victory over the Newton High eleven.

The Malden-Needham lineup follows:

NEEDHAM		MALDEN
Heath, l.e.		r.e., J.Foley
Crisp, l.t.		r.t., Queen
Richwagen, l.g.		r.g., Leather
Howard, c.		c., J. Murphy
Godfrey, r.g.		l.g., Green
Ogan, r.t.		l.t., Dolan
Wyz, r.e.		l.e., Jones

Bluden, l.h.b.		l.h.b., Farmer

Somerville High Plays Marlboro

MARLBORO.		SOMERVILLE.

Dunn, l.t.		l.t., Gilman

Mee, q.b.		q.b., Smith
Moore, r.h.b.		r.h.b., Keating
Dort, l.h.b.		r.h.b., Shea
McInnis, f.b.		f.b., Thornton

Somerville High will line up this afternoon against Marlboro High on Recreation Field, West Somerville. Coach Charley Dickerman has put his squad through some stiff scrimmage the past week and considers his eleven on its stride. Marlboro should put up a good game, as last week it held Waltham to a 7-0 score.

Tom Thornton, Somerville's fighting fullback, owing to an injury received in last week's game with Pittsburg High, is expected to play. Downey is Dickerman's choice in case Thornton is forced to remain on the sidelines.

Kayo for the Giants Tigers Also Put Out

games carded, baseball history will probably be made before night.

If the Phillies win two games, they will be lodged in first place tonight. Brooklyn must take at least one game to retain its proud position at the head of the National League.

A year would indeed be unique if Brooklyn and or other didn't conceive some brilliant idea for taking the money right out of the pockets of the harmless fans. C. Holiday Ebbetts, lord of all he surveys in a certain section of Brooklyn, has become so avaricious that no more, this year, will he allow the humble fan to glimpse at a pair of contests for the price of one.

Today the long-suffering and faithful digger who frequents the Island across from the Battery must dig down in the forenoon to see one game with the Robins and Phillies performing and again in the afternoon for another. We presume that Ebbetts figures to get rich in a day by pulling that stunt. Were he to pull the same double-header there's no question but what the park would be filled to overflowing. As it is, we question his ability to get 25,000 persons into the grounds for both games. And when one figures that he has got to split on two gates rather than one he can see that Ebbetts' graft will be stifled a trifle.

The situation in each league is so complicated today as it was not yesterday. The only changes observed were those mentioned above. No longer must the fans worry over the Tyger menace, nor should those who favor either Brooklyn, Philadelphia or Boston in the National League worry over the fast traveling Giants. Double-headers are on the bill both in New York and Brooklyn in the National League and at Cleveland in the American League. Today, while the Red Sox go steadily on playing a single game at a time.

RED SOX INCREASE LEAD.

As a result of the happenings in the American League yesterday, the Red Sox increased their lead over the White Sox by just the amount they lost the previous day. Today's American League leaders stand as follows:

	To Play	W.	L.	P.C.
Red Sox	4	91	61	.713
White Sox	4	88	64	.733
Tigers	4	87	65	.728

Thus it can be seen that the Red Sox could still lose all their games and finish in front of the Tigers were they to win both of theirs. The final standing of Boston, with 91 wins and 65 lost to 88 won and 65 lost for Detroit, a one-game lead at the end. The Red Sox have two today and the Red Sox win one the chances of the White Sox becoming fully the position would be identical with that enjoyed by Detroit.

The two games with Cleveland the White Sox will be able to prolong the agony for a day or so longer. They seem as much as though they could win, however. They double up today and again tomorrow and the chances of landing four games in two days is considered by a great many as too difficult even for such a team as that led by Clarence Rowland. There seems to be some question as to whether or not Cleveland and Chicago can play after Sunday, providing it rains or tomorrow or tomorrow at the Sixth City. That matter has not been decided as yet.

The standing in the National League today is identical with that which prevailed yesterday. The only fact that is definitely settled is that neither the Braves nor Giants can complete their schedule for this year. Each team loses an opportunity to play a game as a result of yesterday's rain. If the Phillies land both of the games scheduled for today they will pass into the league lead and have something to spare.

A double win for Philadelphia will increase their percentage to .612 and drop Brooklyn's to an even .600. At the same time the Phillies would be a game and a half in front. Were they to split even the standing would be practically the same as is the case today. Brooklyn would then total .607 to .605 for Philadelphia. If the Phillies lose two they drop below the .600 mark and Brooklyn soars to .613.

The Braves by losing both to the Giants will be displaced, dropping from third to fourth position. An even split leaves them still in third place and a double win cements their position. Chances favor Rudolph pitching again today with George Tyler to help out, and from some one of the pair it would look as though

When we said double-headers at Brooklyn, we neglected to recall the latest scheme of Ebbetts. The forenoon game kicks the stuffing out of the double-header matter. It considers it a holiday which we judge Ebbetts has dubbed the "One-a-Month Day." The stock of holidays must well nigh have become exhausted. It is rumored that Ebbetts is still figuring on staging a few games of World's Series seats. He may rates them about as much as he desires to, for at this time it appears very much as though his club would not figure in a World's Series this Fall.

Harvard-Bates Clash at Stadium

Harvard encounters another Maine team in the Stadium this afternoon when Bates will make a determined effort to cover itself with glory. Coach Leary's charges have already disposed of Colby, one Pine Tree State college, and expects a much easier time with Bates.

Dr. Billy Parks, captain of last Fall's Tufts eleven, is making his maiden effort as a coach at Lewiston this year, and, although handicapped by a scarcity of husky material, expects to place a fighting eleven in the Stadium today.

Bates won its first football combat this season, defeating Fort McKinley of Portland, 7-6. Since the game with the soldier boys, Parks has made a couple of shifts which he believes has strengthened his forces considerably.

CHANGES IN BATES LINE.

Shattuck has been shifted from left guard to centre to improve the passing and strengthen the defence, while Hickey, former snapperback, has gone to left end. Captain Dolloff, who reported late, is to start at right tackle, where Mose Taylor performed last Saturday. The latter belongs to the other side of the line, displacing Lovell at left tackle.

CLARK SLATED TO PLAY.

Clark, the 208-pound guard, is suffering with a slight injury, but is expected to be in the line-up. In case he fails to toe the scratch, Bill Snow, former Harvard "strong man," will play right guard.

In the backfield only one change since the Colby game is noted. Horween, a Yale game veteran, failed to impress last Saturday and Tom Thacher, who fits in much more snugly with the fast moving Crimson backfield, will get his first varsity trial in competition.

Thacher is rated as one of the best interferers on the squad, and will have ample opportunity to live up to his reputation, for Captain Dadmun's eleven is going to give this phase of football a thorough tryout.

Robinson still retains his place at quarterback, although pushed hard by Billy Murray and Murray Taylor. "Hank" Flower, who is already gathering in bouquets as a second Mahan, and Rufe Bond are to play right half and fullback, respectively.

Referee—W. N. Morter, Pennsylvania. Umpire—W. S. Cannell, Tufts. Head linesman—S. Pinion, Dartmouth. Extra official—C. V. Brown, B. A. A. Time of periods—Two 12-minute and two 10-minute quarters.

Weaver, the visitor's fullback, is one of the best line-plungers in the smaller colleges. Bates was swamped 44-0 in its last start in the Stadium, two seasons ago.

Coach Leary of Harvard has decided on a shift or two for himself for the matinee. Colby last Saturday found little trouble at times in bending the left wing, so Likens has been superseded by Phinney, who is showing up as the best of Harvard's several ends.

Caner, intercollegiate tennis champion, who reported late, is to start at right tackle, where Mose Taylor performed last Saturday. The latter belongs to the other side of the line, displacing Lovell at left tackle.

Worcester, Sept. 30.—Princeton and Holy Cross clash here this afternoon in the opening battle of the season for the Tigers.

The largest crowd that has ever attended a football game in this city is expected to witness the game.

The local Chamber of Commerce has been booming the game for the past week and the advance sale is a record-breaker for Worcester. A band, consisting of twenty-four pieces, will supply music between quarters.

Holy Cross is much lighter than Princeton, but the Purple has a fast, scrappy eleven, which is liable to cause the famous Rush machine a lot of trouble.

This is the opening game on the Tigers' schedule and the followers of the Big Four will have a good opportunity to size up the Princetonians.

Captain Hogg of the visitors will be opposed at guard by Captain Lynch. Twitchell is to lead the Purple attack.

Despite this apparent strength and the rumor that Rhode Island is stronger than in late years, Coach Robinson believes his eleven will run up at least as large a score as last Fall—24-0.

Things are not as rosy as they might be with Brown, as several of the best players have been kept out of practice all week through bruises, and several members of last year's squad who were expected to return have not yet put in an appearance.

Butner, who played at right end regularly last Fall, has not returned, while Bill Ormsby, a substitute lineman last year, has not reported for practice, although he has registered. This leaves Weeks the only available of the six on last year's squad, with very few capable substitutes in sight.

The most likely looking candidate for Butner's position is Carder, who played end on the Worcester Academy team two years ago. Another prominent rookie is Zelcer, a big freshman.

Several likely looking freshmen have joined the squad this week, notably Annan, a speedy halfback from Newcastle Academy, Wilmington, and Williams, a husky lineman from Noble & Greenough School.

Officials—Referee, J. F. Murphy, Harvard; umpire, Fred Burleight, Exeter; head linesman, J. P. Courtney, Lafayette.

Hanover, N. H., Sept. 30—Dartmouth has its first real tryout of the season today when it lines up against Charley Brickley's Boston College eleven. Head Coach Kavanaugh realizes that his team is in for a fight and gave his charges their first secret practice of the year yesterday.

The big Green line is admittedly weak and the Hub team will give it its first real test, for New Hampshire State rushed but twice last Saturday. Another problem facing Cavanaugh is the lack of substitute backfield to relieve his clever regular trio, Gerrish, Theiscker and Dahamel.

Three linemen who have worked out behind the line all week are "Babe" McDonough, end; Dussouchi, veteran end from Brookline, and "Big Ed" Healy, the former Holy Cross tackle.

Jack Cannell, the prodigal quarterback from Everett, will not start, inasmuch as he has only been out for practice for a week, but may get into the game in the second half. The only change in the lineup starting last week's game is the displacing of Barrows at guard by Gene Neely, the converted sophomore from Texas.

Reports that have reached Hanover about the weight of the Boston College line and the kicking abilities of the Maroon and Gold backfield, have put the Dartmouth warriors to expect a hard-fought contest.

The Boston College squad was quartered at Norwich Inn last night and Brickley seemed satisfied with the prospect of his team. He expects a close contest.

Hugh S. Fullerton, the noted baseball statistician, and Walter Camp, recognized everywhere as football's leading strategist, are writing exclusively for the Boston AMERICAN.

Fullerton's World Series articles, some of which have already appeared in the AMERICAN, made an instant hit with the baseball "fans." They've scored heavily and from every angle. Fullerton has his own pet way of figuring out baseball's classic, and his statistics generally turn out to be facts. Don't miss this series. It's running daily in the AMERICAN, and also appears as a leading feature of the Sunday AMERICAN.

The first of Camp's football stories will be published in tomorrow's Sunday AMERICAN. It deals with the early practice of the big college elevens and is written in true Camp style. It is one of the stellar contributions of the "Father of American Football."

THE UNAPPROACHABLE.

(By a regular newspaper guy.)

I have spoken to princes and spoken to kings
And it wasn't a terrible task,
For they answered politely a number of things
That the editor told me to ask.

I have mingled with governors, mayors and such,
And have asked them a question or so,
But the questions I asked didn't put me in dutch
And I wasn't invited to blow.

I have lingered with senators many a time
And was treated as one of their own,
For they didn't consider my presence a crime
And they spoke in a calm, kindly tone.

I have hobnobbed with officers down on the sand,
Where the scorps and terantulas roam,
And was always extended a welcoming hand,
And I thought I was right back at home.

But the guy who can always go south with my goat
And the gent who is wont to approach
Is never a person of standing or note—
He's a minor league football coach.

Mr. Lewis could make a fortune training candidates for the police department. He can show 'em how to sleep standing up.

Denver continues to uphold its reputation as a spot of great altitude. It finished fourth in the Western League.

Alonso Stagg, we read, is pleased with the football material he has found on the Midway. Alonso spent several days looking over the gang-way at Yale.

Hank O'Day arises to remark that Kid Shay is a second Maranville, showing that Hank is not in his old-time form. It is the first time on record that Hank has said a pleasant word about a ball player.

CONSISTENCY.

"I wouldn't give two bits," Jones said, "to see a game of ball. It does not tempt me in the least nor lure me on at all."

"That's tough," said Smith, "I want to go, but don't know what to do. I asked Sam Whosalf for a pass—the darn fool gave me two."

"If you have passes," answered Jones, "I s'pose I'll have to go."

And ordered drinks and tamales and sprat ten bucks or so.

Yale Hits Upon Number System

New Haven, Sept. 30.—The Yale eleven plays its opening game of the season this afternoon against Carnegie Tech.

The two elevens are expected to use exactly opposite styles of play, Yale clinging to straight line attacks and end runs, while Carnegie is supposed to have a large assortment of puzzling formations.

Yale's players will be numbered today. Previously the plan has been opposed by the authorities here, but it is to go into official effect and be continued throughout the season.

Instead of using his second-string halfbacks, Neville and Waite, Head Coach Ted Jones has decided to start the veterans, Harry LeGore and Bob Bingham, neither of whom have been in the best of condition this week. The Yale lineup:

L.e., Gates; l.t., Sheldon; l.g., Captain Black; c., M. Smith; r. g., Galt; r.t., Belridge; re., Comerford; q.b., T. Smith; l.h.b., Bingham; r.h.b., Ledore; f.b., Jacques

Brown Warriors in First Game

Providence, Sept. 30.—The Brown University eleven makes its season's bow today, entertaining the Rhode Island State team on Andrews Field. The State collegians have already played one game, defeating an eleven representing the Naval Training School, Newport, last Saturday, by the impressive score of 69-0.

Despite this apparent strength and the rumor that Rhode Island is stronger than in late years, Coach Robinson believes his eleven will run up at least as large a score as last Fall—24-0.

Things are not as rosy as they might be with Brown, as several of the best players have been kept out of practice all week through bruises, and several members of last year's squad who were expected to return have not yet put in an appearance.

Butner, who played at right end regularly last Fall, has not returned, while Bill Ormsby, a substitute lineman last year, has not reported for practice, although he has registered. This leaves Weeks the only available of the six on last year's squad, with very few capable substitutes in sight.

The most likely looking candidate for Butner's position is Carder, who played end on the Worcester Academy team two years ago. Another prominent rookie is Zelcer, a big freshman.

Several likely looking freshmen have joined the squad this week, notably Annan, a speedy halfback from Newcastle Academy, Wilmington, and Williams, a husky lineman from Noble & Greenough School.

U. S. Athletes to Work En Route

New York, Sept. 30.—The five American athletes who are on their way to Christiana, Stockholm and Copenhagen to be granted special permission to leave the boat at Kirkwall, while it is detained there for a couple of days for inspection by the English War Department officials.

Feeling that the athletes will require conditioning after the long trip, Secretary Frederick W. Rubien, of the A. A. U., took up the matter with Robert Lansing, Secretary of State.

Lansing answered that the embassy at London had been instructed to ascertain whether Meredith, Simpson, Loomis, Murray and Ward may go ashore at Kirkwall for light training during the time the Oscar II. is in port.

Kilts Revels in Heavy Going

Havre de Grace, Md., Sept. 30.—Accompanied by several showers during the afternoon, the racing was run over a track extremely sloppy, which made fast time out of the question and scratches plentiful. There was not much class to the fields that went to the post.

In the opening event Kilts made a show of her field and won without a splash of mud on herself or her jockey.

King Worth was way the best in the third race and easily defeated his opposition, which was furnished by Pinpoint, which took the place from Wodin. Feminist, which had shown a liking for the mud as a two-year-old, was the one to run up with King Worth, but failed to last when it came to the final issue.

JOHN M'GANN WITH NEW CLUB IS REPORT

It was reported in Boston sporting circles today that the Plaza A. Home Golfers to Battle New York

The Massachusetts golf team had little difficulty in beating the Pennsylvania combination in the first round for the Lesley Cup at the Country Club, Hattiesburg.

The Boston aggregation scored ten out of fifteen points by capturing three of the five foursomes and seven singles matches.

New York, holders of the trophy, will meet the Massachusetts team today. The Metropolitan team defeated the "Keystone" by one point, 8-7.

Five foursomes were to be played this forenoon between the Boston and Metropolitan teams and ten singles matches in the afternoon. The chances for a victory for the Bay State representatives appear very bright.

Shubert Up with Weight Forfeit

The Armory A. A. announces that John A. Miller of Fairhaven, manager of Al Shubert of New Bedford, who meets Young Britt in the feature event on next Tuesday night's card at the Arena, has posted his $250 weight forfeit. Britt's manager put up his forfeit earlier in the week.

Articles have been signed calling for the rival New Bedford battlers to come in at 120 pounds at 9 p. m. the day of their set-to. Miller stated he was willing to raise the weight forfeit to $500 providing Young Britt would scale in at 116 pounds, the real limit of the bantam-weight class.

Miller doubts if Britt can get down to 120 and claims he will take the latter's forfeit if he is as much as an ounce overweight, though stating that Shubert will keep the engagement regardless of how heavy Britt may be.

S. A. TRIP A DISMAL FROST

Joe Woodman Home from Buenos Aires; He's Sadder but Wiser; Langford Starts Training.

By RINGSIDE.

Joe Woodman is back in Boston with Sam Langford, the noted colored heavyweight and topliner of big time string, after the pair's uneventful trip to Buenos Aires with the Billy Gibson party of boxing hightsteppers.

The jaunt proved a "frost" instead of a long series of fights, with all concerned getting big money, only two battles were put on and anything but massive money was turned over to the battlers.

The bouts were fought at Barracas, a thirty-five minute ride from Buenos Aires. It is the wildest sort of a wild place, according to Woodman, and the first show Eddie Keefe won from Mike Mansin in twenty rounds. Next, Sam Langford and Sam McVea went twenty rounds to a draw.

Woodman has the Buenos Aires critiques to prove that the battle between the two brunettes was replete with action; not the "frost," per reports originally exhibited over to this side.

What's more, Woodman has Referee Billy Joh's signed statement that the Langford-McVea fight was one of the fastest between heavyweights he has ever seen, and Joe, New York's leading referee of late years, has been on hand at the bulk of the big time clashes the past twenty years.

Langford goes into strict training next Monday, and by the middle of October will be ready for Frank Moran. Battling Levinsky, Jack Dillon and the rest of them," stated Woodman to the AMERICAN office today. "I am glad that New York State is now permitting 'mixed' fights, as Sam is always a big card in Gotham city, and this means he will get some of the choice Winter dates.

Langford starts his Winter campaign going at Syracuse, October 12, and Joe Jeanette are to have a return bout with Sam knocked out Joe there last Spring, and the big New Yorker has been seeking revenge ever since."

Crowley Is Put Away by Yelle

Freddie Yelle of Taunton, claimant of the lightweight championship of New England, knocked out Mike Crowley of Malden in the eighth round of their carded twelve-round bout at the Commercial A. C.

Yelle was making his debut under Alack MacLean's management. Out-pointed in the early rounds, Yelle got to Crowley in the eighth. He repeated his foe three times. Mike staying down for deferee Sheehan's full count the last time he hit the canvas.

Charles Hume, a newcomer from England, proved a clever boxing boxer, but Johnny Emery of Cambridge easily held him to a draw in their eight-round set-to. Nate Siegel took care of Young Timmins in two rounds and Young Buckley won from Young Chodo in six rounds.

Their Married Life

Helen and Frances Have a Great Time Planning for Anne's Wedding

Copyright, 1916, International News Service.

"Why, Frances," said Helen delightedly over the telephone, "why couldn't she be married here?"

Frances gave a little, shriek of joy. "Helen, do you really mean it?"

"Of course I mean it," Helen returned. "Why, I am simply crazy about the idea, and I know Warren will be. He's so fond of Jack and Anne."

"Are you busy this morning?" queried Frances.

"Only cutting out some dresses for Winifred. Can you come over?"

"Surely I can. Nothing would keep me away after that stunning offer from you, Helen. I guess I can get up in about twenty minutes."

Helen hung up the receiver, her face wreathed in smiles. She hadn't been so happy about a thing and so enthusiastic since she could remember. To have a wedding in the house! Why, it would be simply the loveliest thing to plan for, and Warren would be sure to offer no objections.

Ever since Jack had discovered that he would not be able to go West for the wedding Helen had been worried for fear that Anne was more disappointed than she would admit.

The girl would hear of no postponement. She had promised to marry Jack in September, she wrote, and she intended to keep her word.

"We can be married quietly in a church in Boston, and, anyway, marrying Jack is what counts, not the wedding itself."

But Helen had devoted more than a little thought to the subject. A girl who had planned on a home wedding generally wants a home wedding, and Anne was just the kind of a girl to make her own feelings so as not to make any one else uncomfortable.

Frances had determined to make the occasion as pleasant as she could for the girl, and then, like a shot out of the blue, it had occurred to Helen to offer her apartment for the purpose. The more she thought of it the more delighted she was with the project. It would be just the thing. In the midst of her cogitations the bell rang and Mary let Frances in.

"I was busy writing," Frances explained, "as you must excuse the way I look. I'm later than I would be, too, but it was just next to impossible to get there. There's a blockade all along the line."

"Well, now that you're here, you'll stay for lunch, won't you? There's no one home and I'm just going to have a bite myself."

"Mercy! It isn't lunch time, is it?" Frances ejaculated.

"No, but I want to tell Mary to get another place," explained Helen.

"All right, dear. I'll stay, but I'll have to run away afterward. I have to pour at the first tea of the season. I suppose if I let myself in for it I'll never have any peace. Well, about that wonderful plan of yours. What about it?"

"Well, we'll simply have the wedding right in here. I'll give over the apartment to Anne, and as long as she hadn't intended to ask any one, it will be very simple."

"Quite so. She had planned to have only you and Warren anyway, and the bells. None of her people will be here. You see, her father didn't feel as if he could afford to come on from Kansas. Oh, Helen, they are the dearest people, so fine and so refreshing, just like Anne, you know, with that charm she has, the never seen it here in the city."

Helen nodded understandingly.

"And her mother will be so delighted," Frances went on. "She didn't like the idea of Anne's being married in a church. She said a strange church seemed so cold to her. Oh, I tell you, if you do this, you'll make friends of the Reddings for life."

"You make me feel as if I were doing a great deal," said Helen, "when in reality, I am simply being selfish and doing a thing that will please me more than it will any one else."

"Well, now, let's see," Frances said thoughtfully. "We'll have to have a caterer. That won't be nearly as expensive for Jack as a wedding supper out anywhere. And there will be just our own crowd."

"And we'll have some nice young minister to marry them," interrupted Helen, "and you and I will fix up a bower right here between the windows for them to stand in. She can be married in white and dress afterward. Perhaps it would be a good idea for her to come up the night before and stay right here with us. It would be more like being married at home."

"Yes, and we'll have rice and all the fixings," said Frances eagerly. "And we'll send them off with all kinds of happiness in their souls, the darlings. Helen, I don't know how to tell you what I think of you for doing this for Anne. It means just everything! Every time you turn over your home to them, and it means more than that, too, because you care so much for Anne, I don't know what there is about your apartment, dear, but it seems more like home than any place I know."

And Helen, looking up, met the sincerity in Frances's eyes and smiled happily.

Disfiguring Humor Spread Over Face

Used Resinol. Skin Now Beautiful

Seattle, Wash., Sept. 7, 1915 ... "A small red place covered with little white scales appeared beside my nose. Then it began to spread over both sides of my face and the scales cracked open, causing a terrible itching and burning. It was horrible looking and very embarrassing. I tried many salves, but could get no relief. At last I heard of Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap, and supplied them as directed. The burning and itching sensation was relieved at once and in three weeks I was entirely cured. My face shows no sign of breaking out now, in fact, my skin is considered beautiful." Some Steps to Happiness

By ANN LISLE

Most of us spend our lives in pursuit of happiness. But she is completely elusive, and when we think we have gained her, we always find that she has somewhere beyond.

We all want superlative happiness and happiness is only comparative. We are happy as we give joy to others, fulfill our daily tasks, and work toward a goal of achievement.

Real happiness lies in "amounting to something" in this world. And amounting to something means doing our honest best with our own possibilities and helping other people realize theirs.

An old-time philosopher has suggested four steps to happiness. Here they are: Accept Your Limitations. Seize Your Opportunity. Enjoy the Good of the Hour. Improve the Bad and if you can't let it drop.

Let us examine these ingredients. "Accept Your Limitations" means be sane and logical about your possibilities. Don't exaggerate your talents and insist on flying when it is hard for you to do anything more than walk. In other words take stock of yourself and make the best of what you are and have it in you to be. But don't refuse to sing well in the chorus just because you don't care to be the prima donna.

"Seize Your Opportunity." That, of course, means be awake and alert to whatever chance offers you and make the most of the tiniest opening through which it is possible to get your foot in advance.

"Enjoy the Good of the Hour." Be happy over little things and don't worry because they are not eternal. No sunset was ever less beautiful because it was foreordained to fade and joy and beauty have almost an added charm because they are not permanent. Learn to find joy in little momentary blessings. So you get a happy tendency, a frame of mind that makes for cheer.

"Improve the Bad—and if you can't let it drop." Don't sit idly by with folded hands and accept unpleasant circumstances. Do your best to overcome them—your honest best. But if you find that faith will not quite move mountains but only show you the way to toil over them, try to surmount them.

If footsore and weary you have to give up and retrace your path, be cheerful about that too. Failure bravely accepted is a sort of success.

After all these sign-posts to happiness only lead you on the path to peace. Peace of mind is the greatest happiness mortals can grasp and possess. It comes from the knowledge of duty well done, of work honestly performed, and of kindness and love given to others.

Transferred

A pretty flower-girl in an English city screamed out her wares in such a shrill, penetrating voice that the management of the offices around found it a great annoyance.

Remonstrances had no effect on her, and she was so pretty that the magistrates could not be induced to fine her. So a certain professional man, determined to end the nuisance, offered a liberal reward to the police officer who succeeded in stopping the girl's noise within a limited time.

A month went by, and then, quite suddenly, the girl disappeared from the streets.

Shortly afterwards a handsome young constable entered the professional man's office and claimed the reward.

"You are quite sure you have permanently rid us of the girl?" he was asked.

"Quite sure, sir," he answered.

"That's good. How on earth did you manage it?"

"I married her, and she's making her racket at home now," was the cheerful reply.

Nervous

There is a story of a nervous orator who essayed to preach on Jonah and the whale.

"And for three days and three nights," he began, "Jonah was in the—"

He blushed, stammered, stopped, and then started again. "For three days and three nights Jonah was in the—"

Once more he was covered with confusion and once more he stopped and mopped his face, from which the perspiration was literally pouring, with his handkerchief.

Then he gathered his courage in both hands, and with a mighty effort he finished triumphantly: "And for three days and three nights Jonah was in the society of the whale!"

Her Happiest Hour

By NELL BRINKLEY

ONCE a tiny boy discovered that holding a golden butterfly, on whose wings the sun had shone and roused him to long for it, holding it tight in his hot little hand, possessing it, exulting, he had it not at all. For when he opened the eager hand the bit of beauty was dead. Only a shred of golden rag from whose thin wings the dusty yellow was rubbed. And he wept and thought.

Dreams are true things. Dreams are "happiness," for dreaming is ambition. It is the wish to give. It is the dear desire to have, that we might scatter it again for the people we love, and pursuing the busy dream that flies ahead with us and plans with us in the shell of our ardent heads is more truly possession than to really HAVE.

The work-a-day girl tucked away in her plain little iron bed, her goody-two-shoes hugging one another through the night, dreams of all she would have. Her dream-self pulls down to the level of her heart all the realm of romance and riches and fulfillment. That's her happiest hour. Once a tiny girl said soberly to me: "I go to bed early so I can dream!" MAN pursues his will-o'-the-wisp, ambition, so he may dream. Dreaming is planning, and planning is rich happiness. NELL BRINKLEY.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Novelized From the Great Film Play by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

By Beatrice Fairfax

(Novelized from the scenario of Basil Dickey and produced in motion pictures by Wharton, Inc., Studios for the International Film Service, Inc.)

Copyright, 1916, by International News Service.

IT was Madeline Grey's rash declaration that she would have her letters in an hour which brought Simeon Gold rushing home so far ahead of schedule time. We are all "pawns in the game," say some fatalists. And perhaps her reckless admission to the man she wished to keep unaware of her plans was Madeline Grey's inevitable move in the game she had played almost to her undoing.

While I stood cronched in the dark closet waiting for Jimmy's action to give me the signal as to what it were best for me to do next, I saw through the chink of light which was giving me my bulletin that Jimmy had pulled a silken mask from his pocket and was peering through the eyeslits quite as if he were accustomed to the part of Raffles.

Gold, still holding his gun ready to fire, stepped to the safe and tried its door. Finding that the combination had sufficed to baffle whatever burglar had been in the apartment, he smiled in ugly triumph.

He did not expect that he would be called on to deal with trained minds. He simply took it for granted that Mrs. Grey had hired "yeggmen" to do her work.

What could he intend to do next? Did he realize that the intruders were still in the room? In a moment he moved in answer to my thoughts.

He hurried over to the closet door and jerked it open, springing back as he pulled the handle. He was sure he had discovered the hiding place of his burglar and he had an hesitancy about shooting—if a bullet turned out to be his best weapon.

As the door jerked open I staggered into the room and Gold, seeing a woman, forbore to dispose of her at once, and snarled out a savage demand that she explain her presence there.

Beatrice Speaks Out

I had decided on a course of action. We could not open the door of the safe, Gold must.

"I'm a friend of Mrs. Grey's," I smiled my reply in the most matter-of-fact tone in the world as if it ought to be perfectly obvious to any one why a friend of Mrs. Grey should be calling on Simeon Gold at midnight.

"And I suppose you came to get the letters. Well, the safe door is shut—it doesn't look much as if you had succeeded; so you haven't got the thing you came for, have you?"

Back of the waving curtains I knew Jimmy Barton was poised to spring out and protect if there were need of him. I knew, too, that he had faith enough in me to let me manage the situation and not to interfere with my plans, even though what it was could not yet be clear to him.

So I replied, quite calmly: "Oh, yes, I got them. I dropped them out of that window to a friend who was waiting below. If you don't believe me, you might look for yourself."

Gold studied me for a moment, but I met his glance quite fearlessly, with the scornful smile of one who has succeeded and is willing to take the consequences. It half convinced Simeon Gold. He started toward the safe and then stopped suddenly.

In answer to a sharp whistle, the door opened and a man in chauffeur's livery strode into the room. In his hand he held a heavy stillson wrench. Evidently the chink of light which had betrayed to Gold that there were alien presences in his house had invited him to careful preparation for dealing with them.

"Take this woman in the next room and hold her," said Gold. And as I was dragged out a prisoner I sent up a little plea that Jimmy had fully understood my plan. Its success or failure depended now on him.

Just as we reached the threshold leading to the outer room Gold tossed a casual command to my captor. "If I call for help, knock her on the head. She's outside the law."

"Outside the law." It was quite true. Unless we could meet force with subtlety, Gold would remain in possession of the letters and we might find ourselves facing some rather unpleasant charges. It might mean the end of Jimmy's career—and of Advice to the Lovelorn.

The chauffeur dragged me in the next room, threw me roughly into a chair and mounted guard with grim enjoyment of his task.

What was happening in the other room? I waited tensely for some betraying sound of action. For a moment or two there was silence—and then suddenly I heard the sound of a heavy fall. I leaped to my feet and my guardian turned savagely upon me and swung his wrench.

"Sit still!" he snarled.

Gold Opens the Safe

When I was dragged incommodiously from the room, trusting only to Jimmy's alert wits, that gentleman smilingly awaited the event for which I had been planning. He knew that Gold would have to investigate the truth of my story.

And Simeon Gold did not disappoint him. At once he crossed over to the safe and spun the comb. The door swung open. He reached in and suddenly withdrew his hand. It held a packet of letters. They were of that soft blue-gray called "cadet gray."

Jimmy knew at once that they were written on that same betraying paper which Mrs. Grey had used in appealing to me. So he matched Simeon Gold's smile of triumph with one of his own private stock grins.

After he had made sure that his loot had not been taken, Gold turned to read the letters deep in the vault. Before he could close the door Jimmy dashed from concealment and dealt a savage blow to the man before him. Gold went down in an inert heap. As he fell, Jimmy caught the gun from his hand, and in the very same movement leaped over the prostrate body and dashed to the door of the room into which the chauffeur had led me.

As I have told you, my captor and I heard the fall of Gold's heavy body, and we responded after our kinds.

Even as the man swung up his wrench in threatening gesture, Jimmy threw open the door and covered him with his master's revolver.

The man dropped his weapon and I lost no time in rushing back to the room we had attempted to burglarize, and completing the nefarious deed we had managed so poorly.

In another moment that packet of gray-blue letters was in my hand. Madeline Grey was safe! I had kept my promise—these telltale letters would never appear in the Vampire!

In a flash of intuition I saw the day when there should be no Vampire to make a feast on carrion—the day when Jimmy and I should be working with our paper instead of without its knowledge and outside the law. . . .

But that is another story. I only promised to tell you how we got one "exclusive feature," of which City Editor Barnes printed no word.

In Our Wonderful World

Perhaps a chief cause of our failing to get the most out of life is a lack of sleep, a deficiency which accumulates year by year. Civilized man has lost his natural impulses for sleep—namely, abundant muscular exercise, unaccompanied by nerve fatigue. In cities, multitudes do not know what "muscle fatigue" is, nor of the deep sleep that follows a day of purely muscular work. A second cause for lack of sleep is the general use of coffee, tea, opium and alcohol.

Many persons are firmly convinced, because they have slept shortly after taking one of these, that they are not kept awake by such beverages; but as a rule they are. The physiological hour for sleep is ignored by an artificial hour dictated by drugs. A third reason for lessened sleep is the evening entertainment habit, despite the necessity for early rising. The theatre, opera, bridge party, etc., unduly waste the sleep time. A last reason for lack of sleep is nervecell exhaustion, among the causes of which in our cities may be named the almost continual light-stimulation (rhythmic electric signs, etc.), and sound stimulation (milkmen, electric cars, motor horns, etc.).

The lot of an Eskimo dog is a hard one. In the first place, he has to earn his living by drawing sledges in the next place, food is so scarce that a dog is usually hungry, often hungry enough to eat his harness, or, indeed, any bits of skin and leather he can find. To prevent this the men rub the leather ends with fat. But in order to live at all an Eskimo dog has to fight his way. Whenever there is a pack of dogs together they fight. The weak ones are driven away or killed. The strongest and fiercest one, who can thrash any or all of the others, is known as the king dog. He has the best places to lie, and his choice of the food. A single growl from him is like the growl from an emperor whom all are ready to obey.

Of all the things that can befall a church, nothing could be much stranger than the destruction of a little house of worship north of Hudson Bay. The Eskimos had built a church with whales' ribs for rafters and covered it with walrus hide. The little church held eighty persons; but in the time that elapsed between two services the building was set upon by a pack of famished dogs and demolished in a few hours.

A public clock which can be heard but not seen is one of London's curious possessions. It is in the tower of St. Mary Abbot's Church, Kensington, and is the only public clock in the immediate neighborhood. It chimes the quarters and the hours, but commits itself no further. It has no dial, no hands, no outward and visible sign of any kind to show that it is a clock. This eccentricity, it is explained, is the result of two causes, one aesthetic, the other financial. When the tower was built in 1873 a clock was suggested as an afterthought, but the architect protested that it would mean the addition of fifteen feet to the tower and the ruin of its cherished proportions. A second point was that the church, having but slender funds, could not afford a clock with a dial. A compromise was arrived at by installing the works of a chiming clock in the belfry without dial or hands.

STOCKS ARE IRREGULAR ON NEW YORK EXCHANGE

Prices on the New York Stock Exchange at the opening of the market today were irregular, with gains outweighing losses. There was no letup in the volume of trading.

United States Steel was again the medium of feverish speculation, large quantities of this stock changing hand in the early trading. It opened at 119¼, off ⅛ from yesterday's closing price, and moved up and down between 119⅛ and 119⅝.

Interest again centred in steel and equipment issues. Lackawanna Steel opened up 2¼ points to 90, but later forfeited most of its gain. Other early gains were Railway Steel Spring ⅜, American Car & Foundry ¾, American Locomotive ½, Steel Foundries ⅜, Colorado Fuel ½, Great Northern Ore ⅜ and New York Air Brake 2¼.

Among early losses were Crucible Steel ¾, Republic Steel ⅜, Utah Copper ⅜, Kennecott ⅛, Mexican Petroleum ⅝, Reading ⅜ and Union Pacific 1¼.

The Boston market opened strong, with trading mostly in copper stocks. Gains were fractional. Copper Range, Old Dominion, Calumet & Arizona and Arizona Commercial were active. Boston Elevated opened up ½ point.

The Significance of Mr. Mansfield's Nomination

A STUDY of the primary election returns makes apparent a very interesting and perhaps important development in political sentiment.

Mr. Mansfield was nominated by the overwhelming preponderance of sentiment for him in the industrial centres of the State where organized labor and its larger body of sympathizers are concentrated.

General Cole was better known to the State at large than Mr. Mansfield. He had occupied a succession of important public offices which brought him into the public eye during the last twelve years. He had behind him practically every important Democrat, because every important Democrat believed that Mr. Cole might defeat Governor McCall and that it would be a very doubtful thing if, under all the circumstances, Mr. Mansfield could carry the State.

There was nothing apparently behind Mr. Mansfield but his special plea to the class consciousness of the workingmen of Massachusetts. Ordinarily they have not responded to this kind of appeal. Their power has been demonstrated over and over again in Massachusetts to be decisive and irresistible when aroused AGAINST a public man. They have never shown any political aptitude for advancing the cause of one whom they believe to be especially friendly. This has not been due to lack of gratitude or to a lack of intelligence, but rather to the difficulty which always exists in determining the sincerity of a man whose friendship is a matter of mere promise and profession. Their inertia has had to be overcome by resentment at some definite, concrete, palpable unfriendliness on the part of a public man. Then, when they unite to defeat him in favor of his opponent, their power is irresistible, as it was when Douglas was elected and when Foss was elected, and as it always has been irresistible against the Senators and Representatives when their attention was called to some act of gross hostility.

Now, however, in the last primary, Mr. Mansfield seems to have overcome their inertia and to have started them on a more ambitious course. Mr. Mansfield, though a good enough speaker, is nothing unusual. His record, though entirely acceptable, is not extraordinary. His means of publicity and of appeal, though capably employed, such as they were, did not exceed the normal efforts of a candidate. The reason for the departure apparent in the primary results must be sought beyond Mr. Mansfield's personality and campaign methods. It would be exceedingly interesting if we could know definitely what the causes are which determined the choice of Mr. Mansfield by so significant a majority in the industrial centres.

Is it a growing class consciousness among the working people developing for some time, but just beginning to crop out here and there? Is it the reaction of labor against the disaffection of the Progressive party from their old progressive program and their trailing back to the reactionary Republican organization? Is it the stirrings of the successful eight-hour struggle by the railroad men and President Wilson's declaration that an eight-hour day must be the standard of working conditions in this country sooner or later? Is it the opposition to the eight-hour law by Republican Candidate Hughes?

Henry Abrahams, an able, astute and long experienced leader of organized labor, is a candidate for the School Committee of Boston as a representative of organized labor. Is this, too, a part of a great, imperceptible drift of labor in our political waters?

More great events have crowded into the last three years of our world history than ever occurred in ten years since history began to record human events. Have we been unaware of a tide in our very midst because it is "such a tide as moving seems asleep"?

To Export Foreign-Born White Slavers

THAT is the present program, even though white slavers may be naturalized American citizens.

First, say the authorities, the white slaver will be convicted of a felony, which will take away his citizenship. Then he will be sent back to the land of his birth.

This will probably please the white slaver. He would rather go home than go to jail here. But what about the land of his birth? What will it say?

Suppose China sent back to the United States ten dozen American citizens that had gone to China and there become dangerous opium fiends. Should we not say to China, "You made opium fiends of these individuals, and you may KEEP them"?

Will not the foreign countries to which we plan to send white slavers say to us: "No, thank you, Mr. United States. Your 'civilization,' your system of blackmail and corrupt city government, the indifference of your citizens to their public affairs, your system of child labor and of underpaid woman labor, combined with your high prices, driving women to despair, have made certain individuals into white slavers. You MADE them; YOU KEEP THEM"?

Frankly, in our opinion, the locality that gives a man an opportunity to co-operate with local government protection in the white slave business should supply a jail, to house that white slaver after he has been first developed, then caught and convicted.

More Truth Than Poetry

By James J. Montague

The Reunion

WHEN Teddy grasps the hand of Taft in friendship's kindly grip
And vows to let the bitter past, with all its rancor, rip,
There's just a possibility that Barnes and Root will wink,
For this is what T. R. will say: / And this is what he'll think:

There is no earthly reason, Will, / Same fat old stuff! Same phony smile;
Old friends like you and me, / Just like he used to be;
Should let our feud disintegrate / He hasn't changed an atom since
The dear old G. O. P. / He gave the gaff to me.
Whatever I have said to you / He wears the same complacent look,
I heartily regret, / Of oily self-content,
My hasty actions of the past / And yet, by George, I picked him out
I pray you to forget; / To be my President.
By Godfrey, you are looking great! / That dome of his looks pretty smooth—
I hope no distant day / I wish I had some bricks.
You'll bring the Missus and come down / And here I'm making up to him!
To dine at Oyster Bay. / O, well, that's politics!

WHEN Taft feels Teddy's sinewy hand close folded round his own,
And listens to the cadence of his soft and gentle tone,
In open-mouthed astonishment he'll gasp, and gulp and blink.
And this is what he'll likely say: / And this is what he'll think:

Forget all bygones, Theodore; / He made a football out of me,
The past, of course, is past; / And kicked it round the lot,
Don't think about our little quarrel, / And now he has the nerve to think
Such trifles never last. / The past is all forgot.
I'm glad our dear friend, Elihu, / I'm just as long on charity
And these good gentlemen / As any man could be,
Have given me this happy chance / But no one ever could forget
To shake your hand again. / The things he did to me.
You're still the same old honest friend, / Root says I've got to do this thing,
Of that I'm positive; / And so I'll do my part—
Don't think I bear you any grudge, / It all is for the party, but I've nothing to forgive. / It sure does break my heart!

Starting the Opium Habit

By Woods Hutchinson, M. D.

The World's Best Known Writer on Medical Subjects

WHY, if opium gives so little positive pleasure, does any sane human being ever develop an appetite for morphine or become the victim of the opium habit? The answer is two-fold—first, and most indirect, that exceedingly few such persons ever do form the habit. The vast majority of opium habitues are either permanently unbalanced from inborn mental defect or else were temporarily so from wearing and long-continued agony and distress when they fell under its spell. It is only during sickness and physical discomfort, usually during severe and incessant pain, that opium has any chance of getting hold upon the average human being's affections. And, as a rule, his interest in it ceases absolutely and finally just as soon as pain or distress, which made its deadening power necessary, subsides and disappears.

Many a time in the days of my early practice, when opium was our only sure relief from agonizing pain, can I recall hearing the victim of a street accident, with a broken and mangled leg, or a patient suffering from the throbbing agony of a deep abscess, or one just recovering from the torture of renal colic or gallstones, ask: "Doctor, do I have to take any more of that dopy stuff to make me sleep at night? It puts me to sleep, but I feel so mean and crnery when I wake up in the morning. Don't you think I could get along without it tonight?"

This is the reason why, although probably almost every person in these United States who has reached middle life has, with or without knowing it, taken opium or opiates in some form for the relief of pain, from one to a dozen times, the total number of morphine or opium users, according to the most careful and competent estimates, is only about two in the thousand.

These estimates (which are and can be nothing but estimates, as no actual records have ever yet been kept), give the appalling total of from one hundred and fifty thousand to two hundred thousand opium users in these United States, the former figure being that of an expert of the United States Census Bureau, the latter that of the United States Public Health Service. Every means possible should be adopted to reduce this huge army of misfortune and wretchedness, but it will do us no harm for once to look at the situation from the opposite point of view and contemplate with assurance and satisfaction the ninety-nine million eight hundred thousand citizens who have never become addicted to opium, although probably two-thirds of them have used it at some time for the temporary relief of pain.

Perhaps, before going further, a few words of explanation might be helpful. Opium is the dried and "cured" juice collected from nicks cut in the green head of the poppy; usually grown in the sub-tropics or tropics, as the northern poppy juice is not strong enough in morphine. It is a dark-brown, sticky substance, something like very dirty beeswax or black tar soap in appearance and [illegible]. In the beginning and, indeed, [illegible] about fifty years ago, the crude gum opium itself was used directly as a drug, either rolled into the form of pills, or dried and ground up with other substances like Dover's powder, or dissolved in alcohol and water, to form a tincture (laudanum) or extract.

For some fortunate reason the smoking of opium has never appealed much to Northern and Western races. In spite of the reckless and wholesale use which has been made of the opium-joint in recent fiction, on account of its superb dramatic possibilities, as a matter of fact only a very small per cent. of our army of opium-eaters in this country are addicted to "hitting the pipe." The opium-joints that exist in the United States are maintained almost exclusively by and for Oriental and other tropical races, who have formed the habit in their native country, and their white patrons are both few in numbers and of a class which could very easily be spared without either loss or regret by the community.

Sporting Editor Roars for "A Place in the Sun"

Has All-Star Cast for Sunday AMERICAN Readers—Camp, Yost, Fullerton, et als—Food for Fans—County Drug Trust a News Feature—Wonderful Interview with Mrs. Rantoul—Infantile Paralysis Discussed by State Expert—Monthly Magazine, Too.

The Sporting Editor declared himself:

Why can't we get a mention in the Saturday column this week. We will have a sizzling sport section Sunday. Got 'em going and coming—baseball and football both.

Walter Camp—"Father of Football," y' know—starts a series of daily and Sunday articles on football in the Sunday AMERICAN. He will touch on the big games and the prospects among the big ones from week to week.

Then "Hurry Up" Yost, the Michigan coach, has written a "Sermon on Football" for our Sunday readers. And we cover all the big school and college football games, of course.

Don't go away yet—listen—baseball—Hugh S. Fullerton continues in the Sunday paper his comparisons of players of the six leading teams. We're going to get one of Damon Runyon's stories on the Giants-Braves Saturday game at the Polo Grounds in New York, and all the other sporting news worth printing. One of the best sport sections we ever got out. Just make a note of it, will you?

So we did. Now for other features.

There is a newcomer to the AMERICAN staff. She is a woman from an old New England family and she writes under the name of Florence Wolcott. Her initial effort for AMERICAN readers is an interview with Mrs. Lois Burnett Rantoul.

It is a story of a woman who has suffered but who plunged into a work for other women and thereby found herself. Mrs. Rantoul—granddaughter of James Russell Lowell—said to Florence Wolcott, among other things:

"Enormous fortune made out of the life blood of one's fellow human beings is wrong—all wrong. But what I am especially interested in is the advancement, socially, financially, educationally of the working women."

And much more, particularly interesting when coming from Mrs. Rantoul.

An expert on infantile paralysis, for some time a special investigator for the State Health Department, discusses this terrible disease now epidemic among our Bay State and Boston babies.

This expert sets forth new and important discoveries on the cause of poliomyelitis and on preventive measures which should be taken. At this time, when city, State and Federal health authorities are fighting the epidemic, this article by a leading authority is of value.

Here is a bit lifted out of an amusing story:

My nephew, Yoshiri Hai, who would not have done it if I hadn't, put himself among them grinds at that Massachusetts Technology Institute, where the first book he studies are Japanese Bible that never saw Nippon do it.

Sounds entertaining, doesn't it. Read the whole of it tomorrow.

But here is something not so diverting. There is a "Drug Trust" or "Drug Gang" or "Drug System"—whatever you wish to call it—in Essex County. Federal, State and municipal officials have pursued it in vain. A woman has uncovered it, however, or at least has uncovered enough to show the methods and outline the ramifications of this public peril. It is a sensational story of a sensational system.

Jean Morgan will tell you tomorrow all about the lecture by Baroness Huard of Paris before North Shore society at Mrs. John Hays Hammond's. The Baroness has recently been right on the firing line in France.

South Boston bounds into the Sunday AMERICAN with a kick. It is a vigorous kick, directed against that interesting corporation, the Boston Elevated Railway Company. South Boston says the cars over there are not right and the service over there is not right and what is President Brush going to do about it, please?

Tomorrow brings the AMERICAN SUNDAY MONTHLY MAGAZINE again—October issue. The cover front is "Wireless"—A Harrison Fisher picture.

"Babette," by John A. Moroso, is as unusual and as fascinating a story of dogs and love and fighting as one could imagine.

Detective William J. Burns and George Jean Nathan collaborate in "The Left-Handed Letter."

As if to make this issue a particularly thrilling one a new and exciting mystery story by E. Phillips Oppenheim starts in the October Magazine. It is "The Cinema Murder," which suggests no lack of action. The mere fact that it is an Oppenheim narrative tells readers that they are invited to another fiction treat.

The regular weekly magazine section of the Sunday AMERICAN tomorrow states that "for Every Man There's 'One Dangerous Girl.'" There is a full-page story, with pictures of mighty pretty girls, to back up this startling statement.

Other magazine features include "The Very Speedy Third Romance of Spencer Tyson," "The Beauty Who Likes Only Ugly Men," "Odd New Tip to Toe Fashions," and a double page expose of the frightful traffic in young girls in Manhattan.
